Luther's Hymn.

Our God, our Father ! with us stay, And make us keep Thy narrow way; Free us from sin and all its powers: Give a joyful dying hour;

Deliver us from Satan's arts, And let us build our hopes on Thee Down in our very heart of hearts, O God, may we true servants be ! And serve Thee ever perfectly.

Help us, with all Thy children here, To fight and flee with holy fear; Flee from temptation, and to fight With Thine own weapons for the right Amen, amen! so let it be! So shall we ever sing to thee,

It surely needs no argument to prove that those who belong to the same Church ought to be united in the bonds of Christian fellowship. But how is this to be brought about? This is one of the things that as our blessed Saviour has said, "cometh only by fasting and whole church to her very centre, and alprayer." It is true, our Lutheran church in its outward organization differs from most other Protestant churches, and we cannot expect to see the same outward unity which exists in some other churches. Our form of Church government is intensely democratic-our congregations have no particular connexion with each other. The Paster and Church Council stand at the head of the congregation, and the congregation knows and acknowledges no other visible head. The District Synod, to which the congregation may belong, is nothing more than an advisory body to whose wisdom the congregation may refer, and the General Synod is also a mere advisory body, nothing more. The General Synod prepa our liturgies, hymn-books and Catechisms, and as good loyal members of the District Synods which compose the General Synod, our congregations mostly use the books prepared by the General Synod, not always however. Our General Synod has prepared a form for a constitution for District Synods, find a call for "translucent transplendency," and also a form of discipline, which our churches may or may not adopt. We generally pursue the spirit of those formularies. ster) as to General Synod doctrine. WORTH OF TIME .- To show us the worth of time, God, most liberal of all other things is exceedingly frugal in the dispensing of that; for He never gives us two moments together, nor grants us a second till he has withdrawn the first, still keeping the third in his hands, so that we are in a perfect uncertainty whether we shall have it or not. The true manner of preparing for the last moment is, to spend all the others well, and ever to expect that. Ayer's Cathartic Pills, For all the purposes of a Laxative

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted iato use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never falls through any fault or neglectof its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the mternal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Disarrheea, but one mild action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Bysentery or Diarrheea, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. Agricultural.

For the American Lutheran Ancient Roman Agriculture.

Rome was not built in a day, neither were her agricultural recources fully developed, nor the art of tilling her soil brought to a high state of perfection; until centuries had passed away. During the early days of Rome, the work of farming was the only kind of manual labor deemed worthy of a free citizen From a remark of Cicero, Rome's most distinguished orator, who lived 600 years-after the found ing of the city and 100 before the Christian era, we learn that farming continued to be held in the highest estimation even in his day "For," says Cicero, "of all gainful professions nothing is better, nothing more pleasing, noth ing more delightful, nothing better becoming a well bred man, than agriculture." While Rome was in her infancy, the state alloted to every citizen a certain amount of land, to which each one was carefully restricted. This portion was at first very small, as we learn from Curius, who was accustomed to say that, "the man was not to be regarded a good citizen, but rather a dangerous man to the state, who could not content himself with six acres of land." This was the number fixed by law on the expulsion of the kings, 243 years after the founding of Rome. When the nation had grown more powerful and its limits extended by conquest, the citizens were permitted to own 50 acres, and still later he could hold 500.

The limitation of the freeholder, in the earlier history of the nation, in connection with the old Roman love of agriculture, led to a careful and exact mode of culture, probably with the spade, and hence, in proportion to the amount of land tilled, abundant crops were obtained. Pliny, however, ascribes the productiveness of the soil to the fact that the earth took delight in being tilled by the hand of men crowned with laurels and decorated with triumphal honors. Such was the esteem in which agriculture was held among the Romans that no greater praise could be bestowed upon a man than to call him a grod

Rome had in later times, including a century previous to the Christian gra, an agricultural literature surpassed by that of no ancient, and but few modern countries. The works that have been transmitted to us abound in sound and sensible maxims. For the benefit of farmers we will give a few extracts-"Our ancestors," says Cato, "regarded it as a grand point of husbandry, not to have too Office Stoves, Heaters, the latest and best pat- much land in one farm, for they considered that more profit came by holding little and till ling it well." Virgil says , "The farmer may praise large estates, but let him cultivate : small one." Varro, a well known and distinguished Roman writer, says, "Nature has shown two paths which lead to a knowledge of farming, experience and imitation. Farmers have hitherto by experiment, established many maxims and prosterity generally imitate them, but we ought not only to imitate them, but make experiments ourselves, not dirested by chance but by reason." Among the Romans manures were saved with great care and judiciously applied. The impliments of husbandry used were the plough THROUGH AND DIRECT ROUTE BETWEEN in their general structure similar to those of the present day, spades, hoes, harrows and rakes. With these appliances the Roman farmer raised wheat, rye, barley, oats, flax millet, pease, beans, turnips, the grape and the olive.

The Roman farmer also paid much attention to the breeding of stock, though we have no means of knowing to what point of perfection this branch of agriculture was carried, since on the decline of agriculture animals 950 p. m. were suffered to deteriorate, and everything with respect to distinction of race, or breeds 10 00 a. m. was lost. One writer gives the points of a good milch cow to be the following; "A tall arr at Lock Haven 745 p. m. make, long, with very large belly, very broad head, eyes black and open, horns graceful, 2 45 a m. smooth and black, ears hairy, jaws straight, arr Philadelphia 1000 a.m. dewlaps and tail very large, hoofs and legs 940 a.m. moderate." The same writer gives the follow ing perscription for working oxen : "After ox-Mail and Express connect with Oil Creek and en get through ploughing, and come home Baggage checked heated and tired, they must have a little wine poured down their throats, and after being fed a little, led out to drink and if they will not drink the boy must whistle to make them.'

Will the farmer boys remember this? For centuries, among the Romans, agriculture was honored and engaged in by many who were justly distinguished in other pursuits of life. Under such circumstances agriculture would naturally receive much attention, but as the empire grew in power and. wealth the operations of agriculture were en-Wide range of application without change of trusted mainly, like in the case of the Greeks, to the hands of bondmen, who had little or no interest in the soil they tilled, and this alone washing and ironing.
