Prayer for a Good Convention

LOVING GOD, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ and our Father: As the convention of The Evangelical Lutheran Church is about to begin, we its members come to Thee asking Thy blessing; praying for the presence of the great Bishop of the Church, Jesus Christ; beseeching Thee for the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Keep Thy protecting hand over those who travel to this meeting. Let them journey in safety and peace. Preserve them from mishap and accident and danger.

Give strength to the beloved President of our Church. Let a special benediction rest upon him as he now presides for the last time over the Church he has served all these years so faithfully and well. Bless all those who have special responsibilities to perform: committee members, board members, officers, and executives; and all those who are to lead us in our worship day by day.

Let those whose voice and vote shall determine the course our Church shall take in the years ahead be constantly mindful of their responsibility to Thee and to the entire Church. Keep everything that is offensive from our words and actions. When we speak, let it be as in Thy presence; when we act, let it be wisely and prudently, with vision and hope and trust.

Thou hast granted us to live in a day of great opportunities for reaching men with the Gospel. Doors open before us as never before. Forbid, O God, that indifference, or slothfulness, or timidity on our part should be a barrier to the free course of Thy saving Word and Thy blessed Sacraments.

So we commit our Church—its members young and old; its pastors, teachers, evangelists, and missionaries; its officers and officials—to Thy guidance and protection. Grant us all to be obedient to Thy will. Honor us by using us. Humble us by exalting the name of Jesus, whom we love and serve. Amen.

The Monastery, Academy, and Camp

Loren Halvorson

All of these are at Loccum, Germany, a small town not far from Hannover. The message of Easter has been proclaimed here for hundreds of years and still continues to confront the world to this day. This is the drama of the monastery, the academy, and the camp. The monastery is a familiar landmark with its lofty Gothic spire rising above the tile roofs of Loccum as a silent symbol of a Christian mission which has been here for nearly 800 years. The monastery now is part of the Lutheran Church of Hannover, the only Lutheran "monastery" in the world; but instead of monks, it is now inhabited by students who here complete the last years of their theological training.

To this day there remain the rigorous study and withdrawal into solitude which characterized the medieval church emphasis on meditation and spiritual discipline. These young men, however, do not remain in the monastery. After two years they go out to face the busy modern world as pastors of the Lutheran Church. Once men dedicated their entire lives here to seclusion and devotion. In those past centuries great cathedrals were built by men who lived in an age when all of life found its universal meaning in the Church. In every vocation religion was a powerful element. Today, however, the modern world has largely discarded its Christian foundations and broken from its old traditions. The old churches and monasteries are for many merely interesting places listed in their tourist books to be seen for their cultural value. For many the Church today is symbolized by such relics of a past age. Here in Loccum, however, there are also other signs of the Church no longer as an ancient institution, but as a living force proclaiming the message of Easter to a world whose situation is desperate because it has tried to exist apart from its Creator.

A short distance from the monastery

Chapel of the nearly 800 year old monastery

are a group of new buildings of the Evangelical Academy. Here are no enclosed walls nor lofty heights, but large, modern windows viewing the monastery whose heritage in the Christian faith the Academy shares, but whose view at the same time is open to the world with all of its problems and needs. The Evangelical Academy is also part of the Hannover Lutheran Church, with the task of being a place of encounter between the Church and the world.

There are fifteen such academies in Germany today, providing opportunities for men and women from all vocations to come together for three to five days of conferences dealing with their common problems. The people who come are largely outside of the Church and often do not speak nor understand its language, but with the others of their own profession they can share their problems and soon find that the Academy provides an atmosphere of mutual trust where each can speak openly. Those who come mistrusting the Church for some reason or other soon discover that the Church is not here to propagate any particular political issue, economic theory, or party line, but simply to listen to people who are confused and discouraged in the modern world and help them to see that basically their problems are spiritual. The discussions inevitably lead to basic religious problems where the Church has a unique opportunity to bear witness to its Lord. The same opportunity also exists in the Bible studies and devotional services which are a part of every program.

In Loccum the conferences range in size from 60 to 130 persons. These groups are usually mixed, since the men are always encouraged to bring their wives. The meetings are led by one of the two pastors who are directors of the Academy, and the topics cover nearly every area of German life. Recently there have been conferences for industrialists dealing with their responsibility as employers, for government officials on the political development since 1945, for representatives of the press on the Berlin Conference, for former army officers on the issue of a new German army, and for young laborers. During Holy Week there was a special week of meditation led by Bishop Hanns Lilje.

The speakers for these conferences are chosen from an increasing circle of Christian laymen who are leaders in their own fields and who through the seven years of the Academy's history have been enlisted to assist in this important work. There is the famous physicist from Gottingen, the editor from Hamburg, the government official from Bonn, the historian from Heidelberg, and many others. In this work the Church finds itself today, as it did centuries ago, in the center of men's lives, listening to people discussing basic problems which they cannot solve alone. Often it is not easy to listen to nor to answer the questions arising from our complicated life, but the Church of Christ need not fear this task, for in its hands has been placed the message of the Risen Lord. The thousands of people who come here each year do not find the Church hiding behind monastery walls, but in the midst of their problems confronting them with the only answer to life—life with God in Jesus Christ.

But there is another and a not so encouraging aspect of this picture of Loccum. Outside of town a short distance lie another group of buildings. These are a cluster of dirty brown barracks where newly arrived refugees from the East Zone live. This reminder of our divided world is also a part of Loccum. These refugees came to the West seeking a new way of life in peace and freedom. They came because they had been promised a better way of life. But after months of crowded camp life and unemployment, they become disappointed and often bitter. These refugees and the visitors from the East Zone who come to the Academy pose an inescapable question to the Christian Church. Our higher standard of living has not convinced them that we therefore necessarily have a better way of life. They discover as much faith in material things here as there is back on the other side of the Iron Curtain. Their sober questions cannot be pushed lightly aside nor can our position be too easily defended, for the basic problem of our day is neither a military nor an economic one—it is a spiritual one. Their question is directed to the Church.

The Monastery, the Academy, the Camp—the Church of the past, the Church in the modern world, and the world's question to the Church—all of these were part of the picture at Loccum this Easter when Bishop Lilje came for the festival service. It is significant that he came, not to speak in the stately monastery church, nor in the modern assembly room of the Academy, but rather in the dining hall of the refugee camp with old army blankets for a backdrop and a simple table for an altar. The congregation on this morning consisted of the youth who were attending a conference at the Academy and the refugees. Here the Bishop of the Hannover Church and president of the Lutheran World Federation came to men in their needs with the message of the Risen Christ.

What happened this Easter at Loccum is only part of the drama of the living Church which must proclaim the Gospel if it is to remain faithful to its Great Commission. To men and women in Loccum came the message, "The Church of Christ has come to us. He is arisen."

Behind the Bamboo Curtain

The urgent desire of all missions is to peer behind the Bamboo Curtain in China to see what is taking place there. Speaking in generalities, we can say that there are two manifestations of church life. The one is a Church that has sold itself by full compliance to the Communist government and has become its agency. The other is the Church living in defiance of forces that demand compliance and compromises, sometimes boldly, sometimes underground. We have pictures of both of these types of churches, received recently.

SOME HAVE BOWED THE KNEE

From the April 1 issue of the New Church Magazine, which is edited by Ch'en Chien Hsun, formerly editor of the Lutheran Weekly, we have a letter written by the Rev. Kuo Ching of Junan, Honan, China. Both these individuals are well known to our missionaries who have worked in China, and it is rather interesting to have this letter (translated by the Rev. Thomas Lee). It reveals something of the situation within the Church of China when that Church has fallen under Communist control. The letter follows:

"Fellow Believer X X:

"Have received your letter and thank you for your concern for our studies here. I shall report all below:

"In regard your questions our studies have followed the general line under the leadership of the Executive Branch of the All Circles Council of the County Government. We have been engaged in these studies for over three months. Having completed this section of the studies, the men and women of our local congregation have received a profound and impressive enlightenment. Moreover, all of us were brought to the realization of the superb and happy socialistic ideology of our Motherland. This Socialism is not an idealistic dream of the distant future. It is an hourly experience as we march onward in our toil.

"We have, therefore, made a step forward as our thinking has been elevated. All of us have come to this resolve: that, in this period of realistic increased production, we go forward with and assist our Motherland to flourish.

"During the government's 'Planned Purchase and Planned Sale of Cereals' [In the U. S. A. we would speak of it as the rationing of foods.—Lee] the Church has manifested a sincere love for their country. A case in point is fellow-believer Chin Lan Fang. [Miss Chin is a graduate of Kiangwan Bible School, and has served as Bible Woman for nearly thirty years.—Lee.] She kept in storage for herself two hundred and sixteen (216) chin of wheat. [One chin equals about twenty ounces—Lee.] She had stored this grain to save it for herself, for she is ill. [yu tien mao ping.] But when she came to the realization of the country's industrial development, she sold [surrendered—Lee] the whole supply of wheat, and voluntarily decided to eat the coarser cereals. [The Church has been actively campaigning to convince the populace that they should not eat fine wheat flour or polished rice, but should instead eat the coarser grains—millet, kaoliang, soy bean and barley—Lee.] A large number of her fellow-believers were so deeply moved by this fervent example of love for one's country that they decided to fully support the political position of their country. Together, they sold to the government thirteen hundred and eighty (1380) chin of wheat.

"The situation of the Church in the eastern part of Junan County under the blessing of God is good. The numbers of those studying the doctrines are increasing. Each congregation has about one hundred people (100), the most one hundred forty (140), the least about sixty (60). At present we do need studies in the Catechism [Wen Ta Hsueh Hsi.]

OTHERS FIGHT ON

This letter indicates the Communist captivity of the Church wherein that government controls the Church and directs its activities to further the Communist cause. As such it supports those pastors politically who have surrendered themselves to the government program, and tries to undermine the influence of all pastors and other Christian workers who have refused to bow to the government dictates. In the March 15 issue of Tien Feng, which is a government-approved and supported church paper, a letter is printed attempting to discredit Chiang Ch'eng-en, a traveling evangelist in central China who has been very successful in rekindling the faith of individuals and re-establishing congregations that have been disrupted by war and political opposition. It urges that the pastors—evidently those who are approved by the government—should be accorded more honor. The letter closes by reminding the leaders that they must not abuse the freedom of religious belief that the government has guaranteed them. A very interesting incident taking place in reference to this letter is that there were groups in central China that publicly burned copies of the Tien Feng that attacked these evangelists. This shows a great deal of daring and would seem to indicate that there is a fairly large segment of the Church that does not go along with the policy of the "Government Committee on Church Reform."

Hsieh Chin, the official monthly magazine of the National Christian Council of China, has been under attack because it printed a list of Christian books recently published in China. Evidently a lot of these books were not approved by the Communist government, and the editor of the magazine is forced to come with a very abject apology for having mentioned these books in the magazine. The interesting aspect of this incident is the fact that these books have been published. It indicates that there are Christian groups somewhere in China free enough so that they have avoided the government surveillance to the point that they have been able to print books strongly condemned by the Communist government. All these incidents are straws in the wind which show that the Church is struggling against Communist control and is effectively able to continue its spiritual program in some areas of China.

HONAN AND HUPEH

From our own mission field in Honan and Hupeh we have received news from Mrs. Palmer Anderson. I am quoting from this letter, not using names in every case, in order to protect the individuals concerned:

"A student here in the Colony, son of Pastor 'T,' formerly of Loshan, hears from his father quite regularly. Another son, in Tientsin attending a government university, goes to a Christian service each Sunday together with other students and a few of the professors. A daughter is attending school in Peking, and she reports going to Wang Ming-tao's services each Sunday. The church is not large enough to accommodate the crowds. Pastor 'T' is now living in his own home in the Junan district. He was able to conduct three days of meetings at Miaowan at Christmas time, when five men, seven women, and three children were baptized; seventeen men and forty-four women partook of the Lord's Supper. The congregation at Miaowan in the Junan area has regained the use of its chapel in payment of taxes.

"At Shangtsai, a Mr. 'Y,' formerly at the Bible school in Sinyang, had conducted a series of special meetings in which Pastor 'T' had participated. Pastor Kwo was still in Junan but seemingly not able to travel in the country or serve other places. Pastor Wei was still at Chengyang and free to conduct services. Pastor Nien was at Chumatien; Pastor Li at Suiping with Miss Tung (formerly at the Bible School) assisting him. At Sinyang during Christmas, Pastor T'an (formerly of the Bible school) baptized five persons. It was not known whether the service was conducted in the church or not. Pastor Wu Ying conducted a similar service at Min Chiang, baptizing a number of people there.

"Folks here receive letters from workers in Shanghai and Canton. Mr. and Mrs. Gould and Miss Willis of Shanghai report that there are an estimated 50,000 people attending services there. During 1952, $10,000 worth of Bibles and Scripture portions was sold at the Bible House."

You will note that Pastor Wang Ming-tao is mentioned in the above report. Since this report was written, we have received telegraphic information that Wang Ming-tao was executed at Peking as a reactionary. Pastor Wang was a powerful evangelical preacher and refused to bow to the dictates of the Communist government that would force him to compromise his Christian message. From another source we have learned that thirty pastors from one area in China were called in for investigation. They were given a choice of two things: going along with the government or never preaching again. Two men accepted this choice. The other twenty-eight were taken out and shot.

LIFE UNDER COMMUNISM

In reference to the picture of Communism in China, I would like to recommend a book that is just off the press, written by Quentin K. Y. Huang, a bishop of the Anglican Church in China. The book is entitled, Now I Can Tell. This book is a well-balanced narrative of the experience that the bishop had as he spent 79 days in a Communist prison before being released. Without rancor and without an undue spirit of crusading, he gives the story of his arrest, his imprisonment and release in direct, unvarnished narrative, analyzing the Communist policy and activities in China as he proceeds with the story, closing with a chapter analyzing Communist land reforms in China. The closing paragraph of the narrative of his experiences gives something of the spirit of the entire book and of the man who has written it:

"Only by faith, I was able to pull through physical sufferings and mental tortures of those seventy-nine days in jail; by faith, I was enabled to see and resist such a tempting offer from the dialectical and diabolical 'devil'; by faith, I had courage to escape when God provided the means of transportation; by faith, I came to this great land of liberty and democracy with my family; and, above all, by faith in God, I came to realize that it was my duty to tell, through my own experiences and insight, what Applied Communism actually is, in contrast to the sweet 'theoretical' Communism, with fond hopes and fervent prayers that you, as the readers of this book, will not be fooled or deceived by the clever Communist propaganda and sweet promises, and so that you may learn the lessons of life, but not in the hard way—as I have learned them, at the hands of the Devil! By God I am spared! To God I dedicate my life again!"

I thank God for this book. It is the type of book I have hoped would come out from the experiences some of the men in Communist prisons have endured. I have been disappointed in the accounts I have read to date, but this one, demonstrating the calm Christian faith of the author, the ability of faith to overcome, gives also a calm analysis and draws sound conclusions from the events that take place and the incidents he endures and witnesses.

Your Non-Resident Members

Conrad M. Thompson
Director of Evangelism

It was midnight. The darkness of the churchyard was broken only by a few moonbeams which intermittently broke through the trees and reflected upon the rows of tombstones. A cemetery at midnight, of all places, should be quiet, for the dead do not walk again in this life. But the pastor heard a commotion of some kind coming from the far corner of the cemetery. Walking a little closer he heard voices. A grave was being dug.

As he approached the scene, even his wildest and most extreme imaginations could not have guessed the reason for a burial, without a funeral, without a pastor, and at midnight. Neither can you.

The grave was being dug for one of those individuals who hadn't kept up his membership in his old home church. With the right of membership and regular payment of dues went the privilege of burial. There was no other way to be buried next to kin except for relatives to smuggle the body in at night. It sounds fantastic and extreme, and it is. But it is one of the many problems to be faced when thinking of non-resident members.

What It Does to the Soul

If an accurate record could be taken of non-resident members (people who have moved to a new community but still retain church membership in their former community), the figure would be shocking. The resulting tragedy is often the death of the soul. People who retain their membership back "in the old home church" are usually not much concerned about the church where they live. Irregular attendance, decreasing stewardship, and spiritual indifference are bound to develop. They do not sense any responsibility to the church in the new community and, though they may think otherwise, they are of very little value to the church back home. Some may "pay dues" to their church back home, but in most cases these are mere pittance, barely covering cemetery privileges.

When our church members fail to transfer their membership, it often reveals something about their spiritual concern and convictions. They have little or no conception as to what constitutes the true Church. They think of it only as a building where there is an adjoining cemetery instead of, if they are Christians, holding membership in the "invisible Church" and belonging to the Communion of Saints. If they fully sensed this relationship, that of belonging to the Body of Christ, what would be the difference whether their names were on the membership roster of a church in Minnesota, California, or Madagascar? Some say they cannot transfer because of the love they have for the old home church and because they have kin buried in the church cemetery. When I transferred my membership from my home church I don't think I lost a bit of love for that church, nor did I cease to be sentimental about my brothers who lie buried in the adjoining cemetery.

Too often an unwillingness to transfer serves us as a smoke screen whereby people think they can escape their obligations to God in the giving of their lives—their time, talents, and money. Just as a fur coat stored in southern Minnesota would be of no value to one living in Canada, so Christian people should have their memberships where they live and work, even if it be a year, two, or ten. A transfer is much easier to move than a trunk. Many a person's soul is lost to Jesus Christ because he failed to relate himself to a church in his new community.

The Home Churches' Part

I was told of a family which many years ago moved West. They did not want to transfer their membership, and the church in northern Minnesota did not want to release them. Neighbors told me of their increasing spiritual lethargy as the years wore on. Twenty-five years had gone by without their being anything but occasional "church tramps." They had raised a family outside the Church, and the results were as expected—sin, shame, and disobedience running rampant, and now in their adulthood, broken homes and remarriages.

Who is responsible, we ask? Most people would say, the family itself. This may be true, but so is the "old home church" responsible. How could it expect to minister to the family's lack of church interest 2,000 miles away? How could it stand beside them in their troubles, sicknesses and sorrows? Yet, as members of the congregation, the obligation to shepherd that family in the name of Jesus Christ was still theirs. A distance of many miles cannot erase our responsibilities as a Christian Church. Non-resident members are still the spiritual responsibility of the home church.

If our congregations will realize their God-given commission to serve every member on their rolls, whether resident or non-resident, there will be more anxiety to give the responsibility of their non-resident members to the congregations in the communities where they live and encourage them to transfer their memberships.

Some Things to Do

(1) The pastor and a member of the Board of Deacons are urged to call on the family before they leave and encourage them to request a letter of transfer soon after moving.

(2) Advise the family that you are sending members' names to a Lutheran pastor in the new community.

(3) Conduct a "Service of Godspeed" for the family at a Sunday morning worship service. (See Lutheran Evangelism Council literature.)

(4) Send a letter to the pastor in the new community giving all pertinent information concerning the family's interest in the Lord and His Church.

(5) Soon after the family moves write a letter reiterating the necessity for a permanent church home and urging the family to request a letter of transfer.

(6) If, after six months no action is taken, send another friendly letter and advise (some churches are following this procedure) that their names are being put on the inactive list.

(7) If the family's membership is bound by cemetery rights, seek to make the cemetery association a separate organization in itself and not related to church membership. Burial privileges can be retained by membership in the cemetery association.

(8) If repeated requests fail to bring about a transfer, continue to minister to the family through monthly mailings of the parish paper, tracts, and printed sermons.

(9) Non-resident members refusing to transfer should be constantly reminded of their spiritual and financial responsibility to their home church. Sometimes a request for a large donation to a building fund will speed a transfer like nothing else.

(10) Ministers who receive the information concerning the family should consider it a sacred trust and should minister to the family immediately.

(11) If the location of the family in a large city is vague, send the address to the secretary's office for proper referral.

The local church, if it is to properly fulfill its ministry, is accountable to every non-resident member and cannot consider its responsibility fully met until everyone is happily associated with a church in his new community where his spiritual needs will be adequately met.

If each congregation will demonstrate a Christ-like concern for non-resident members, thousands each year can be kept and won for Jesus Christ and His Church. Take heed to yourselves and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit has made you guardians, to feed the Church of the Lord which He obtained with His own blood (Acts 20:28).

Augsburg's Book Store Remodeled

NOW INCLUDES ECCLESIASTICAL ARTS AND MUSIC DEPARTMENTS

Since most of the offices of Augsburg Publishing House have been moved into the new ELC building at 426 South Fifth Street in Minneapolis, the Book Store facilities have been expanded. Pictured below are some of the improvements.

Dedication of the new building and open house will be held on June 12, during the Biennial Convention. A book store will be set up in the basement of Central Lutheran Church and at the WMF convention in the Minneapolis Armory.

BOOK STORE, facing Fourth Street. This view shows the rearrangement of display counters and shelves to accommodate visitors more easily, with wrapping counters and cashier's desk moved to the center rear of the store for greater efficiency.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT. This new location provides a sound-proofed record listening booth, as well as a piano room, more filing and desk space, and special counters for records and music literature. The rooms at 408 South Fifth Street, formerly used by the music department, are being converted into private offices.

ECCLESIASTICAL ARTS DEPARTMENT. This newest department of the store features chancel brassware, hangings, vestments, church lighting, and religious art. Another view of the room would show an altar erected to display dossal curtains, altar hangings, and altar brassware. Betty Forde looks over a book of emblems which can be ordered through this department.

The date of this issue is June 8, one day before the Twenty-First General Convention of The Evangelical Lutheran Church opens. A little "last minute" material can therefore be included here, with some assurance that it will be read before or during the convention. In addition to the following editorial remarks, special attention is called to the chart and article by Dr. Dybvig on the pages immediately following.

Once again we hope to be able to bring our readers the story of the convention with the least possible delay. Next week's issue will already be on the press when the convention opens. In the issue of June 22, however, it will be possible to give a great deal of information. Through the kind co-operation of the people in the shops at Augsburg Publishing House, a number of pages will be held open until the last possible hour. We hope to have the complete story of what transpires on the first two and one half days of the convention in that issue.

Our Most Crucial Convention

Several months ago we stated here that the 1954 convention would probably prove to be the most important in the history of our Church. We still believe that it will be just that. The three matters which were mentioned at that time loom as large or larger today: the election of a new president of the Church; the election of a new president of Luther Theological Seminary; and action on the Report of the Joint Union Committee.

It is to be hoped, however, that these "high priority" matters will not be permitted to usurp the concern of the convention to the exclusion of many, many other matters to be acted upon. It must not be forgotten that this is a "regular" convention of the Church; it must legislate in all matters concerning our work for the coming biennium. True, many of these matters are of a somewhat routine character and usually call for little or no floor debate. Nevertheless, they must be clearly understood and carefully considered by the delegates if action on them shall represent the will of the Church.

A hurried paging through the volume of reports and resolutions submitted by the various boards reveals that there are matters of great importance to be acted upon. The Church Council submits two resolutions regarding the administration of the colleges; it proposes passage of a statement on the Clergy Roster; it transmits reports from two special commissions, the one on Student Service and the one on the Diaconate. The Board of Trustees is recommending certain changes in regard to the Budget which are of the greatest importance. The Board of Charities has some special resolutions concerning the Red Wing Seminary property. From the Board of Pensions come several resolutions intimately affecting the pensioners of the Church, present and future.

EDITORIAL

Just Before the

Our point is that this would be a most important convention quite apart from the three matters which are being most widely discussed. When these other matters are included, the whole thing does add up to our most crucial convention since 1917, when The Evangelical Lutheran Church was born.

Elections

The discussion of a new president of the Church has been carried on on a very high plane. There seems to be a prayerful seeking to know the will of God. The qualifications of possible candidates are being conscientiously weighed, with most questions being asked as to this one or that one as a spiritual leader. One of the by-products of the discussion is that the Church is discovering that it has not a few men who seem to be qualified. When eight or ten names can be mentioned time and again, all of them seemingly qualified to lead our Church, one cannot but conclude that God has blessed us richly with men of character and ability.

The same is true of the discussion of candidates for the presidency of the seminary. While the nominating machinery is different, in that the Church has established a body which places one person in nomination (with the convention free, of course, to make additional nominations from the floor), and while there are special qualifications needed to fill this position which few men have, we yet have heard half a dozen men named who certainly could fill the position well.

To us it adds up to this: The Evangelical Lutheran Church finds it necessary to fill its two highest positions at the same convention—something which has never happened before and probably never will again. It finds itself with a large number of qualified men. While to be sure, delegates will come with "favorite" candidates in mind and will vote for them with conviction, we are sure that when the Church has made its decision, everyone will be happy and satisfied and grateful to God. That, we submit, will be evidence that God's will has been done.

And Now the Merger

After all the editorials about the merger which have appeared here, it may seem superfluous to say anything further. Perhaps it is. One brother has told the editor that the large amount of editorial material which has appeared has discouraged others from writing. We hope

Convention

Some matters concerning the organizational structure have come in for negative criticism, of course. Careful note has been taken of such objections in order that they may receive further study. How many of them will come up in the discussion on the convention floor we do not know. Let it be remembered that Resolution III makes provision for listing objections to the Report, with the request that further study be given by the Joint Union Committee to the points in dispute. On the whole, we believe that the organizational structure has been favorably received throughout the Church.

Three questions concerning the proposed merger have come up time and again in discussion meetings, matters which are not in any way connected with the Report, but which are, nevertheless, perfectly in order when the wider aspects of the merger are being considered. They are: (1) the relation of the new Church to the World

The subject of dancing and other matters having to do with the Christian life are in a different category. Two years ago our Church adopted the United Testimony on Faith and Life, which deals adequately with the scriptural principles involved. To re-open that subject now appears to us to involve either dissatisfaction with the document adopted two years ago; or a departure from principle to incident. That is a very, very dangerous road to follow. It is the simple truth that in each of the four bodies there are situations which should not be. Shall we let our merger discussion degenerate into a comparison of things that ought not to be? If that actually is necessary, we do not believe the bodies are ready to merge. But if we trust one another, we must believe that the principles enunciated in the United Testimony will prevail. If one of the practices of one of the colleges in the ALC shall be subject to convention discussion, as was implied in an article in this paper some weeks ago, must we not in fairness at the same time discuss matters at our own colleges which we do not like, and such other matters as unionism and lodgism; and must we not then expect that the ALC shall air our shortcomings in its convention?

The third question, "Why merge?" goes to the heart of Resolution II. In fact, that resolution is included for

The Merger and the Lutheran Family

Philip S. Dybvig

The chart on the opposite page has been prepared to show more clearly the relative sizes and groupings of the Lutheran bodies in America and thus make the proposed merger more meaningful. There are 16 Lutheran bodies today. If this seems like an excessive number, bear in mind that the latest yearbook of American Churches lists 11 Presbyterian bodies, 23 Baptist bodies, and 23 Methodist bodies. Furthermore, let it be borne in mind that there were more than 57 varieties of Lutherans in America some years ago. Historians actually put the number some place between 65 and 85.

But the unity of any denominational group is not revealed by merely telling the number of bodies. To say that there are 23 Methodist bodies in America would suggest that they are a highly divided group whereas the big majority of all Methodists are now in one body.

A study of the chart shows that the Lutheran picture is not as divided as it might seem when we merely say that there are 16 bodies. Note that the four synods comprising the Synodical Conference are grouped together because they do have close ties and maintain a distinct separation from the rest of us. Note too that after the merger now proposed is consummated, all but 8.5 per cent of the Lutherans will be in three main groups nearly equal in size. Study the group of smaller bodies and you will discover that less than 2 per cent of the Lutherans in America are to be found in the six smallest Lutheran bodies, and three of these are no larger than some individual Lutheran congregations.

What has caused the reduction in number of Lutheran bodies from 65 to 16? The answer is mergers and more mergers. Mergers and only mergers are the sure road leading to the unity of the Lutheran Church. In the past, mergers came frequently. Several decades had two or three mergers, and from Civil War days to the present we have averaged one merger every six years. Obviously, the mergers came closer together when the bodies were smaller and more numerous. If the present merger is consummated in 1957 (which would surely be the earliest possible date) this present period will be the longest period in a hundred years between mergers, namely, 27 years. Here again the outward fact tends to misrepresent the true situation because these present years have seen more of co-operation and understanding among the separate bodies than any other period in the past.

But it still remains true that there has been no major merger since 1930, no single step to reduce the number of Lutheran bodies. This is to some a most discouraging fact and is no doubt one reason why many are enthusiastic about the present merger.

We have placed the merger group between the other two larger groups because that is where we belong. This is true of us whether you consider doctrine, practice, or even geography. In reality the proposed merger is but a consolidation of the middle group of Lutherans, not in order to form a block against the other bodies as some have suggested, but rather to recognize that we do have much in common, and to help us make a greater contribution from our heritage to the total stream of Lutheran church life in America.

Through co-operation in the National Lutheran Council and also in the American Lutheran Conference, we have learned that we are so much alike in doctrine and practice that a merger will make it possible for us to conserve more fully and richly for future generations our great distinctive heritage and thus help us to contribute our best to the total Protestant Church in America. And we do have a contribution to make just as each of the other groups has much to give also. This is true of us most especially because we are a middle-of-the-road group of Lutherans both in theology and in practical churchmanship.

When we consider the history of the Lutheran Church in America and study the chart depicting the Lutheran family at the present time, it seems strange that this merger has been opposed by some on the ground that what they want is a merger of all Lutherans. The merger road in the past has led step by step to the present unity and the merger road is the only one that leads that way now. Perhaps the reason why it has been opposed is because in the opinion of some we are so close to the end of the road that we could just as well go all the way at once. This, however, is unrealistic because there is yet an attitude of critical aloofness on the part of a large section of the Lutheran Church over against the rest of us which makes complete unification of the Lutheran family impossible in the foreseeable future.

But this merger is definitely a step along the way and therefore gives much encouragement to those who hope for an eventual consolidation of all Lutherans in one body. No one knows whether that day will come or when it will come. Furthermore, there is a great possibility that the necessary organization for one body would be too cumbersome and unwieldy for effective work. In the meantime, we will through this proposed merger have a better working alignment of Lutheran bodies for the years that lie ahead. Surely it will be a better working arrangement for the future to have over 90 per cent of the Lutherans in three main bodies of approximately equal size rather than to have the great disparity which is true at the present time. It may eventually lead to co-operation in the National Lutheran Council by Missouri Synod, which is to be desired.

One cannot study this chart without thinking of the fact that for many years Augustana has been in the American Lutheran Conference, co-operating with this middle group which is now planning to merge. If Augustana had not withdrawn from the negotiations, then this merger would have cleared up the Lutheran picture in America beautifully with over 98 per cent of all the Lutherans in three main bodies—one with 33 per cent and another with 31.3 per cent and the merger group with 34.3 per cent, leaving only 1.4 per cent for the group of smaller bodies.

Only the future knows what is to come. We have much evidence, however, that the Spirit of God has been working in the Lutheran family during the past years to correct and improve, so that there is increasing co-operation and understanding as the years go by. Under the guidance of the Spirit this may lead to such unity of doctrine, practice, and purpose that a future generation will rise up and say, "We want one Lutheran Church in America." Then people may look back upon this present merger and see that it was but another step along the way.

Unanswered Prayer

MILDRED OFFERLE

*We feel that God has passed us by,
When we have prayed and been denied.
Yet, often in our childhood days
We found our wishes set aside,
When parents felt they were not wise;
For they had known—so God now knows—
What things would be the best for us,
And that was how they always chose.*

*Our God will never turn aside,
Unmindful of a child's request,
But in His love we must expect
That He gives only what is best.*

The Friends of the Lord

TRINITY SUNDAY

Text: John 15:12-17

Of all the names by which Christians have been called, the name suggested by this text no doubt is most expressive. To be a friend of the Lord is a high privilege.

For the friends of the Lord there is no need to live in fear. Friends are not slaves. Friends are not servants. Friends enjoy the warmth of love and the joy of companionship. They share in happiness and sorrow and with mutual understanding they bear the burdens of life. They may speak with one another and with words communicate encouragement and comfort, or in silent meditation they may communicate deep feelings of the heart. To be a friend of the Lord is a high privilege, for friends are chosen.

You see that, certainly. Natural men are not attracted to Christ. The nature of man and the nature of the Divine cannot be attractive to each other. By nature man tends away from all that is good and right and holy. And yet, the grace of Jesus Christ is outreached to all men. His choice is the choice of grace just as surely now as it was when He went resolutely to the cross to accomplish the redemption of the world. It is His will that all men should be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth. In Holy Baptism He chose you. In the ministry of His grace He chose you. In the ministry of Holy Communion He chose you. He chose you and He chooses you from day to day as His grace is extended to you for the forgiveness of sins, for life and salvation. To be a friend of the Lord is a high privilege, for friends are co-workers.

To be a co-worker of the Lord is just another way of saying that Christians are to bear fruit. You are a friend; you are a co-worker for the purpose of the Lord Himself, namely, to make more Christians. True faith, if it shall live, must work the works of God. Our Father insists that men can be more than men, that life can be more than twenty-four hours a day, that the world itself can be a far better place, and that men of earth can and must have citizenship in heaven if they shall know real life now and possess life eternal.

The friends of the Lord preface the day with prayer, and they close the day with prayer. They know (surely you know) that prayer is the strength of holy endeavor. Thus they pray, believing. They pray in high confidence, trusting the will of God for life as it is lived.

Of all the names by which Christians have been called, this name, above all, is best: friends of the Lord. What is your name? By what name are you known? Are you now, by faith, a friend of the Lord? Amen.

CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY

Read Acts 4:32-35

Now the company of those who believed were of one heart and soul, and no one said that any of the things which he possessed was his own, but they had everything in common.

The members of the early Church made an attempt at communal living. They did this not because they wished to experiment with an idea, but because they were filled with love. Their Christian faith was so great that it translated itself into terms of real sharing. In place of closing their hands on their possessions and saying, "This is mine," they opened their hands to one another and said, "This is yours."

In the political sense, communal living has never been a success, but in the Christian sense true sharing may go on, no matter what the form of government may be. The child of God knows that all he has belongs to God. He knows that he must use the things he has been entrusted with to the glory of God. He must share with others.

Help us to help one another, O God.

THE CHURCH

Read Acts 2:42-47

And they devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers.

It must have been a wonderful experience to belong to the Church in the days of the Apostles. There was real fervor, love, and joy. There was missionary zeal, and "the Lord added to their number day by day those who were being saved." Church was such a good thing that people were anxious to come into its fellowship.

Long ago a man disappointed in his own church wrote to an "expert" and asked what could be done to "put it back on its feet." Everything had been tried, he said. "Why don't you try religion?" came the reply.

To this day, if the Church wishes to have the same experience had by the early New Testament Church, it must abide by the same Word, the same Spirit, the same purpose that controlled them. Teaching and fellowship: this the Church must have and offer to all. Let the Church be the Church. Let me help my Church be a true Church. I know the world needs it more than ever.

WHAT INFLUENCE?

Read Matthew 13:31-35

"The kingdom of heaven is like leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till it was all leavened."

Every person in life exerts some kind of influence on those around him. Either this influence is good or it is bad. In the parable Jesus told, the leaven the woman added to the three measures of meal worked its way into all of it. It influenced its entire surroundings.

Each person should consider what sort of influence he is making on life. Starting with home, is it a better home because he is there? And the people he works with, and meets during the day, how are they influenced?

The desire of every Christian is that he should influence people toward Christ. And if the Spirit of Christ dwells in a person, that same Spirit will show itself in all contacts.

"Surely, this is a better world because he is here." That's the sort of remark made about a person who puts the leaven of Christian faith into the "meal" of life.

POWER OF THE WORD

Read Mark 4:26-29

"The kingdom of God is as if a man should scatter seed upon the ground, and should sleep and rise night and day, and the seed should sprout and grow, he knows not how."

According to this parable of Jesus, the more seed sown the more harvest there will be. And those are the directions to the Church. Sow the seed. God will cause it to sprout and grow. We cannot know all the deep mysteries of the working of the Spirit. But we can preach and teach the Word. God will use that, and there will be a harvest. Not everyone who hears or is taught will be in God's harvest, but there will be those with whom God was successful.

This truth is applied in all things. If we are praying for a friend who needs to come to God, there is a point beyond which we cannot go. If we have spoken to him and prayed for him, God must take it from there. And let us believe in the power of the Word. There is no greater power on earth. It accomplishes that which God sends it forth to do.

ALWAYS REMEMBER

Read Deuteronomy 6:4-13

"And these words . . . shall be upon your heart . . . you shall bind them as a sign upon your hand . . . you shall write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates."

In this way the Children of Israel were being impressed with what it means to know God and to have His love. They were to have reminders of it everywhere. They were to teach it to their children and to speak of it constantly.

It is well for everyone to have reminders of God. These serve to keep the reality of the unseen alive in a world where men are apt to live for things that are seen. Pictures and plaques on the wall, daily use of the Word and prayer serve to keep a person close to God. But besides these, it is possible to think about God at all times. "I do not believe there is a single moment in the whole day that God is not in my thoughts," said a Christian business man. He knew God, and his heart and mind and soul were filled with Him. We, too must always be remembering God.

A GREAT NAME

Read Genesis 12:1-4

"And I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you and make your name great so that you will be a blessing."

It was to a man named Abram that God came with a call to be His follower. In the course of events his name was changed to Abraham and, as the Lord said, his name became great. He is the father of the Old Testament faith.

A change in names from old to new, from common to great, from godless to godly is significant. With Jacob it was changed to Israel; with Saul it was changed to Paul. Greatness came with the new names.

A man appeared before a judge with the request that his name be changed. Asked why he wished to do this, he replied, "I am a converted man. I wish to break away from my past life and my past sins. I am living in an entirely new world; therefore, I wish to take a new name." His request was granted.

Every person who believes in Christ has a name that is great: Christian.

Praised be Thy Name, O Christ. Amen.

A New Venture in Faith

These pages are edited by Mrs. J. B. Huffman, General WMF Radio Chairman

WMF FUND FOR RELIGIOUS TELEVISION

Down the pages of Scripture marches the glorious word—"venture," as it goes hand in hand with faith. The Bible is indeed a record of the grandest venture under the sun. The executive board of the Women's Missionary Federation has stepped out on a new venture of faith, confident that every one of its members will co-operate whole-heartedly. In support of the expanding television program of our Church, they have established a WMF fund for religious television. This fund will be promoted in July at the local WMF meetings, when members will be given the opportunity to participate with their gifts.

For over twenty years radio broadcasting has been a part of the women's work of our Church, because we feel that we should accept and appropriate every instrument and implement which God offers as an aid for us. Television is a medium through which many other Churches are making a tremendous impact upon their listeners. Our Church has taken steps to meet this great challenge also. We have a television evangelist, the Rev. Norman Hammer of Northridge, California. Program production is under way. Pastor Hammer tells us, "There is no time like the present, when new stations are opening all over the country and when good programs are at a premium and wanted, to offer our program, 'It Happened to Me,' to the television stations. If we do not act now, the doors may be closed."

America is a semi-pagan nation, with millions of unchurched, most of whom live within the sound of church bells, and some within the very shadow of the church itself. Through radio programs we have brought many souls to Christ and His Church. It is to be expected that we may reach many more through the more than thirty million television sets in American homes today.

Never in the history of our nation has there been such a general feeling of despair, of futility, on the part of the people of every station of life. This is the golden day of opportunity for the Church to present a positive, dynamic message of grace and hope. If America is to be won for Christ, we must push out the walls of the Church—we must share Christ today—tomorrow may be too late.

How America Is Changing is the title of a series of illustrated advertisements appearing periodically in daily newspapers throughout the country. The series is being sponsored by the Institute of Life Insurance. Many of you may have been impressed by the picture of a family at worship—and even more so by the caption, "Americans are in the midst of a great renewal of religious interest." In support of this statement, the advertisement stated, "Since 1940, membership in religious congregations has increased by 27 million—over twice the rate of our population growth.

"During this period, thousands of places of worship have been built. There's been an increase of 40,000 active clergymen.

"More Bibles were published between 1940 and 1950 than in the previous 40 years. The vast audiences of religious radio and television programs also reflect our growing spiritual interests.

"Although we Americans have made great gains in our material possessions, it is the renewal of spiritual interest that adds meaning and significance to these material gains.

"The stability of our families and homes, as well as the progress of the nation, have their roots in moral and spiritual values. We in America have always enjoyed freedom of worship, and it is of tremendous importance that we are more actively using this opportunity."

Television in its present stage is an effective means of reaching entire families. The youth problem and the disintegration of home and society in urban areas is based on lack of Christianity in homes. A judge who handled juvenile delinquency cases stated that 70 per cent of the 6,000 cases that he handled annually were the result of Godless home environment. What a challenge is given us! God can accomplish great things through us if we proceed humbly, asking for blessings and guidance for producers, listeners. We must have the vision of what He can do for us through this new venture of ours. We are such a comfortable people! But there is not much comfort in venture! We must be willing to take risks. We have begun prayerfully. In Jesus' name must all of our work be done, and then, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might" (Eccl. 9:10). That is the spirit of eagerness that we need as we go forward. What a privilege is ours as members of the Women's Missionary Federation to help in expanding this new program of our Church! Let's ask for God's grace to do it gladly, willingly, and with all our might!

"IT HAPPENED TO ME"

The Christian Church and Christian people are ever seeking for effective ways to communicate their witness to Christ as their Lord and Savior. Almost everyone who has had the opportunity to become exposed to the miracle of television has been impressed by its marvelous power to convey information and change attitudes.

It is only reasonable that the Church, on behalf of the many Christians it represents, should attempt to harness this powerful force in contemporary communications. We are therefore pleased to report that the ELC now stands on the threshold of a tremendous opportunity to bear witness to Christ by way of television.

A fascinating and appealing program idea entitled It Happened to Me has been developed by the Division of Evangelism through the Reverend Norman Hammer, ELC television evangelist, with the Office of Public Relations responsible for production, promotion, and distribution of the proposed series. A pilot film in color has been produced as the initial step in what might well become an important television development.

In order that the people of our Church might have the opportunity to see it and determine for themselves whether it is worth their support, the Church's Brotherhood has assumed the project of arranging a church-wide projection of the pilot film in every parish of the ELC within the next few weeks.

It is encouraging to observe that the WMF, too, has recognized the tremendous potential of television by establishing a television fund. The WMF which pioneered significantly in the area of religious radio broadcasting in our Church, is to be genuinely commended for its vision in promoting the utilization also of the new medium of television. Through their television fund the women of the Church can express themselves in tangible, positive, and progressive terms.

Christian wives and mothers are in a strategic spot to relay their opinions and ideas about the Christian use of television so that the Church's ministry through this medium may be as effective as possible.

the specific purpose of affording each body an opportunity now to review the entire merger question and decide whether to continue the negotiations or not. As we have stated repeatedly, we believe that such a resolution is necessary, lest we find ourselves carried along, step by step, into a merger without ever having faced, as a Church, the fundamental question of whether we believe it to be God's will that our Church lose itself in this larger fellowship. We trust that this subject will be fully discussed before a vote is taken on Resolution II. And, may we add as our opinion, This should be a ballot vote.

What it all comes down to, obviously, is that the Church must decide. Under our constitutional procedures, that decision is made by the convention, and by it alone. If the convention says, "We shall continue," that is binding; if the convention says, "We shall withdraw from the negotiations," that settles it.

There is no disposition on the part of anyone to exert undue influence on the Church to enter the merger.

While we are sure that few people feel that the leadership of the Church is attempting to rush us into a merger for which we are not ready, it has been stated that such is the case. We reply with all the earnestness at our command that there is absolutely no foundation in fact for such ill-considered statements. The leaders of the Church have tried to follow to the letter the mandates of succeeding conventions. Our Union Committee has leaned over backward in its effort to be completely objective. If it is true (as we believe it is) that the members of the Union Committee and the elected leaders of the Church favor the merger, that is a matter of sincere conviction. We repeat: There has not been, and is not now, any disposition on the part of anyone to foist this merger on the Church against its will.

We repeat: The Church must decide. All anyone can ask is that the matter shall be carefully studied, thoroughly discussed, prayerfully reviewed. The experience of many years of convention-going in The Evangelical Lutheran Church convinces us that the action taken in just a few days will be wise and Spirit-guided.

MERGER AND THE WORLD COUNCIL

► Working out a merger of four church bodies becomes a matter of give and take, in which each body seeks to preserve those special emphases for which it stands.

If the ELC presses for a dynamic and expanding program of Christian education in the merged Church, as Pastor Ofstedal so ably spells out in his letter to LUTHERAN HERALD in the May 18 issue, it will have made a real contribution to the merger cause.

However, if one can judge from his letter, it would seem equally clear that the ELC may not bring the same dynamic and positive approach to the problem of ecumenical relations, and that in this area we should rely on the leadership of our brethren in the American Lutheran Church and the United Evangelical Lutheran Church.

As Pastor Ofstedal points out, the ALC and the UELC are members of the World Council. If they have benefited from this membership and recommend that it be continued by the merged Church, should not their judgment prevail in this matter? After all, they have the experience and our Church does not.

I was on the staff of the World Council of Churches in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1948, and followed, through the HERALD, the arguments that were advanced at that time for not joining the World Council. I felt then that the fears expressed about what kind of agency the World Council is or would become were without foundation, and I believe the experience of the past six years validates this view.

Pastor Ofstedal implies that if the World Council "were simply a free association of Churches banded together for purposes of conferences of doctrine, for joint charitable enterprises, etc.," that he would be for it. Let me assure him that this is exactly what the World Council is. None of its member Churches has surrendered any of its sovereignty as a result of joining the World Council. Nor have the denominational lines been blurred in the World Council; if anything they are stronger today than they were six years ago. To be sure, it is hoped that some of the differences which divide Christian communions will be diminished through work and fellowship in the World Council. But is this an evil? However, I don't know of a single responsible World Council leader who is thinking in terms of one big Church. Unity, not union, is the object of the World Council.

Another criticism made by Pastor Ofstedal is that the World Council does not acknowledge the Scriptures in its creedal statement, which does, however, recognize Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. As I understand it, the Lutheran Church of Norway, under leadership of Bishop Berggrav (one of the World Council's presidents), is seeking to make this necessary correction at the World Council's second assembly in Evanston this summer. I would think that most, if not all, of the 37 Lutheran Church bodies (with 44 million Lutherans in their membership) which belong to the World Council would support this amendment, along with hosts of other Christians. Lutherans, incidentally, comprise about 28 per cent of the estimated 160 million Christians represented by the World Council's member churches.

I believe the question of World Council membership is one that should be left for the merged Church to decide. Certainly the ELC at this year's convention should take no precipitous action that would forever bar the merged Church from membership in a useful agency just being developed. Naturally, I hope when the merged Church does make its decision it will be in favor of World Council membership, for I believe that isolationism, religiously as well as nationally, is outmoded. The ALC and the UELC will do us a great service if they constantly remind us of that fact.

SUGGESTED RESOLUTIONS

► The following resolutions have not gone through the proper channels as yet, due in part to the fact that the information and experience on which they are based were not available in time. They are therefore submitted for consideration by letter rather than as an official convention communication. They may, of course, be altered or rejected in passing through channels, but knowing the desire of pastors and delegates for as much advance information as possible, I take this means of submitting a potential item of convention business.

I.

WHEREAS the Church at its 1952 Convention placed upon the General Secretary's office the responsibility of "taking immediate steps to ready the Church for the greatest possible use of television"; (1952 Annual Report, page 34)

AND WHEREAS a beginning has been made through the Office of General Secretary and Public Relations, in co-operation with the Division of Evangelism, particularly Pastor Norman Hammer, television evangelist, and with the assistance of Brotherhood personnel;

AND WHEREAS the need and possibilities of television in the program of the Church are greater than ever;

Therefore, Be It Resolved,

(a) That the initial efforts to comply with the 1952 resolution regarding television be approved;

(b) That support of television solicited through the showing of television films to congregations and by special gifts be encouraged;

(c) That consideration be given to the inclusion of funds for television in future budgets of the Church;

(d) That co-operation with other Lutheran Churches in the area of television be further investigated;

Therefore, Be It Resolved,

(a) That the possibility of combining films with radio and television be considered by the Board of ELC Films and the Board of Trustees, with power to act.

(b) That study be made by the Church Council and the Board of Trustees as to the advisability and practicability of the future establishment of a department of broadcasting and films;

(c) and, That it be suggested to the Joint Union Committee that study be given to the advisability of establishing a Division or Commission of Broadcasting and Films in the proposed merged Church.

III.

WHEREAS, there is need for uniformity in practice in reporting membership statistics;

WHEREAS, on the one hand, the Church needs to guard against hasty action which practically excommunicates members from congregations and The Evangelical Lutheran Church for convenience and not in accordance with scriptural grounds, and needs rather to develop a more patient and zealous shepherding viewpoint;

AND WHEREAS, on the other hand, some practical way is needed to deal with the problem of members who may have been inactive or absent for many years, in order that realistic membership figures may be attained;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That pastors and congregations be urged to examine, and, if necessary, to revise constitutional provisions and congregational practices to the end that after five years of inactivity due to absence or other causes members may be omitted from current membership statistics (whether or not permanently removed from the rolls), inactivity for such length of time being presumed to be an indication of probable desire to withdraw from membership. Wherever possible, such members should be visited, or communicated by mail, before such action is taken.
