Letters

This column offers opportunity for expressions on matters of interest to our readers. Letters must be signed, although names will be withheld upon request. We reserve the right to reject, print in full, or omit matter not pertinent, according to the nature of the letter and space limitations. The opinions expressed by readers are not necessarily those of the Editors.

"SIN TO NOT ADVERTISE"

In your editorial "Publicity Week," February 16, you said: "Why cannot each congregation (or group of congregations) run a weekly paid ad in the community paper setting forth briefly but attractively what the Lutheran Church believes and teaches?"

As a businessman and heavy advertiser, I say and am firmly convinced that it is a sin to not do what you suggested — pay to advertise and pay a good big percentage of our churches' gross incomes, whether there is room or not in the budget for it, and by all means to take advantage of the free publicity offered.

This sin will not be upon all members of the congregation nor upon ministers who, by the very nature of their business and in order to be good ministers, are idealistic and have to spend most of their time and effort in study, preparing inspiring sermons, and administering to the spiritual needs of their people.

This sin of omission will rest heaviest upon businessmen and advertisers like myself who by the very fact of our existence know that advertising is a must to even survive in a business, let alone progress! Proper use of advertising in our modern times will enlarge our membership beyond all expectations. It is our duty as Christians to spread Christ's Word.

The Knights of Columbus are this day proving that advertising is making their Roman Catholic Church grow. Then shouldn't we with the true Christian doctrine do the same for our Lutheran Church?

Not only can the work best be done or headed by men who actually get their bread and butter through fret and worry over preparing ads that get results, but they will likely be the only ones sold on the idea. To partly relieve my conscience, I intend to designate that at least $200 of my 1954 contributions go toward advertising.

We are the salt of the earth with our true Biblical doctrine, consistent ministers, inspiring services and churches, and LUTHERAN WITNESS. But are we sharing this tremendous wealth with others by seeing that they know of it? Many people I meet don't know of it, and some are even Lutherans. We need badly to use the newspaper mats and copies available to us through our promotional departments.

We could lose out someday on radio, television, and movies, but a newspaper program of advertising will perpetuate itself. Who doesn't keep up with current events through local papers?

What more worthwhile organization could be developed nation-wide than a Lutheran Church promotion group, perhaps calling the members the Knights of Christ. But please no swords, and don't wait for an organization to form. Resolve now and start now to inform humanity. It pays to advertise Christ.

FROM THE STOVEPIPE HAT ERA TO TODAY

I have just read the April 27 issue of the WITNESS from A to Z. I have been a reader of the WITNESS ever since Pastor C. A. Frank — the man with the long hair, stovepipe hat, gold-headed cane — started it 72 years ago. This is the finest issue of the WITNESS I have ever seen. Both contents and make-up are excellent. Congratulations! Keep it up!

"LIVING STEEPLE"

May I suggest a thing of living beauty for a church edifice? I am thinking particularly of the house of God announced to be forward looking by the Church Architectural Guild of America.

Would a living steeple of a large evergreen bring us the heavenward look? Or a white pine rising to its Lord? Planted on the side of the church that is only partly seen, the tree would tower on its God-wrought trunk even over that house that man had set before himself in faith in each word of God. Cannot the living wood give us a steeple to the house that has the inward calling look?

ST. PAUL'S FOR LUTHERAN MIDSHIPMEN

One of the continual problems facing a church in a service community is keeping track of members arriving and leaving. If, in addition to this, the church is newly formed, there is the added problem of making its presence known. This is the problem which St. Paul's of Annapolis faces. Each year about a thousand young men arrive for the incoming class of midshipmen at the Naval Academy. These men come from all parts of the country. Advance knowledge of St. Paul's presence would be a vital factor in keeping those incoming Lutheran midshipmen in membership through organized church parties. It is felt that this information would be of vital interest to Lutheran parents of prospective midshipmen, not only now, but in future years as well.

THE MOTORIST'S PRAYER

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by.
Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of Thine.
Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company
From the evils of fire and all calamity.
Teach me to use my car for others' need,
Nor miss through love of speed
The beauties of Thy world,
That I with joy and courtesy may go my way.

"THINK ON THIS"

If you someday will want to have it said
By Him who knows the life that you have led,
That it was spent to glorify your Lord,
That to your fellow man you brought His Word,
Then think on this betimes ere life is gone,
Lest you in vain live on in deeds ill done.
For thus our Lord in His all-gracious way,
In deed and word, while in our sins we lay,
Passed us not by, but brought us help and rest,
And now bids us to serve Him with our best.
If you, while life still lasts, would think on this,
What joy is yours when in eternal bliss
From those here saved by Jesus' grace alone
Rewards of praise you reap before His throne!

Where Are the Trumpets?

By WAYNE SAFFEN, Oberlin, Ohio

This is Ascension Day.

This is a day when trumpets should blow throughout Christendom and all men should ask: "What is the meaning of this fanfare?"

We should answer: "Why did the trumpets blow in the Court of St. James last June?" In quick reply we would hear: "Because trumpets have for centuries announced the coronation of a new king or queen in England.

Coronation Day

Then we would answer: "So trumpets blow today — for on this day we celebrate the coronation in heaven of our Lord Jesus Christ, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. This Ascension Day is Coronation Day for Jesus."

He who left the Father's palace in the dominion of eternity had sojourned on a silent planet, watered by tears, steeped in sin, wrenched with suffering, and rocked by the blasts of warfare. A King He came — but robed in flesh — and He passed by almost unnoticed through the crowds until they caught His piercing eye and heard the beat of a sympathetic heart and were wooed by the voice which would not let them go. The sick of the world were laid at His feet, and tormented minds and souls cried to Him for deliverance. Men and women gathered themselves about Him and followed Him whom they called "Messiah."

A King was Jesus — but incognito. "He veiled His heavenly majesty and took on Him a servant's form." True God was Jesus — but He became the Son of Man. Rich was Jesus — yet for our sakes He became poor. Crucified was Jesus — but for our redemption He was raised again on Easter Day.

Ascended — Yet Present

And now, on this day, ascended is Jesus. But He is with us always. "And He shall come again to judge the quick and the dead. And His kingdom shall have no end."

But where are the trumpets this Coronation Day?

They are silent on earth. No trumpet calls us to worship King Jesus. Only the trumpets of heaven are heard, and who on earth is attuned to the sounds of heaven?

Earth is almost without a spiritual hearing aid. Communication with Heaven is poor. No television station carries the elaborate ceremonial. No commentator describes the occasion on interplanetary radio. In this materialistically bound world what cannot be seen on television, or heard on radio, or read in newspapers often fails to register. So this Coronation Day passes by almost unnoticed. This Ascension Day is just like any other Thursday to earth — even to hosts of Christians who barely saw this day in special markings on their calendars.

And where are the people of Christ this Coronation Day? Angels throng the throne of Christ and chant celestial lays. But people's voices are muted, their hearts oblivious to, their eyes averted from, this coronation.

We must recapture the message and awareness of this day. We must realize that on this day our Lord went up to heaven — but not to leave us to our own devices and pleasures. He rose to rule. And He shall come again.

"Go — Preach!"

He went up, and we must go forth. Let's stop talking about the "good old days" — when you used to go to church regularly; when you were a good friend of a previous minister; when you went to Sunday school; when life was slower and easier; when the world was more peaceful; when the dollar could buy more; when the Church didn't cost so much in money, or time, or consecration, or work. All of these things are insignificant.

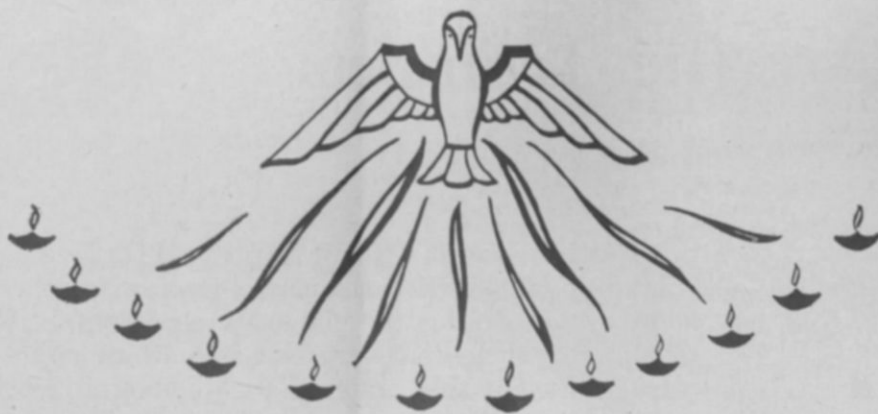

For Jesus left a message at His Ascension, a directive to all who say that they are Christians and claim to follow Him: "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel."

Can we do less this Ascension Day than to celebrate the coronation of our Lord in heaven, than to sound again the trumpets proclaiming our living Lord and returning Judge? Can we do less than spread anew the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation? Can we do less than pledge ourselves His loyal subjects in the kingdom of God?

Our Lord went up!

Quo vadis?

Where are you going, Christian?

"Filled with the Holy Ghost"

By PAUL M. BRETSCHER

Professor of Philosophy, Concordia Seminary, St. Louis

The terse and seemingly matter-of-fact observation of St. Luke, "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:4), unlocks the mystery of the Christian faith and the hidden strength of the Christian Church. How did Peter, James, John, and the other Apostles know that the risen Christ was the divine Lord, that He was the Stone which, though rejected by the builders, had become the Head of the corner, the one co-ordinating and integrating Principle of God and man, the Reconciler of heaven and earth, of things visible and invisible, the Desire of nations? How do the inspired writers account for the cogent and compelling witness of Peter and the other Apostles, for the unshakable confidence of these unlettered Galileans, for the brotherly love of the early Christians which culminated in a completely voluntary form of sharing their goods, for the compulsion which animated these Christians to travel wherever it was possible to travel for the purpose of proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ, for their readiness to suffer and to die in the performance of this task?

The answer is not: these men were supermen endowed with extraordinary intelligence, with unusual moral strength, with blind determination, with clairvoyant insight. Nor were they wild-eyed stargazers, mad men suffering from strange fixations and hallucinations. Least of all were they alcoholic neurotics. God Himself supplies the answer through the inspired writer St. Luke: "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

The Miracle Repeated

This Pentecost miracle is repeated, however, whenever someone struck down by the holy will of God repents, is baptized, and in true faith acknowledges Jesus Christ as his Lord and Savior. Such a person is filled with the Holy Ghost. He then glorifies God and his Savior Jesus Christ by hearing His voice in the proclamation of the Gospel, by eating and drinking His body and blood in the Holy Sacrament, by confessing His name, and by following in His footsteps. Such a person conquers sin, Satan, and the world. He triumphs over disease and death. He lives the life in Christ and for Christ, like the Christian lady who wrote me recently: "Tomorrow I will be 73. I can hardly see. I have dropsy. I broke my hip. But I have many things to be thankful for. The Lord placed this cross upon me. Now it is for me to live with it as long as He wants it and as best as I can." The Holy Ghost makes us Christians. The Holy Ghost enables us to live and to die as Christians.

"Filled with the Spirit"

In view of all this, St. Paul aptly wrote to the Ephesians: "Be filled with the Spirit" (Eph. 5:18). Man as he is without God is filled with anything except the Spirit of God and prefers to remain filled with objects of his own choice. The Prodigal Son, like many prodigal sons since his day, wished to fill his belly with the husks that the swine did eat, but only after he had filled the vacuum of his life with sinful pleasures of debauchery and excess. The fact is, as St. Paul has it, all men whom God gave over to a reprobate mind are "filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; they are full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity" (Rom. 1:29). So it is in our day. There are those in untold numbers who in spite of the warnings of the Church are filling their lives with sin in all its lurid manifestations.

Empty Lives?

It is said of people who live a humdrum existence, "These people live empty lives." In reality, no one leads an "empty" life. Everyone's life is full, full of something; if not full of material things, then full of worries and cares, blasted hopes, and vain desires, guilt, grief, sorrow. Often such a life which on the surface appears to be utterly empty is overflowing with thoughts of despair, like the life of the young physicist whose family tragedy so completely occupied his thought that he believed he could find relief only by inhaling the deadly fumes of potassium cyanide. We shall not make the lives of people fuller by telling them to read Shakespeare's sonnets rather than Hume's Dialogs, or to drink carbohydrates rather than alcohol, or to listen to Bach rather than to a Bacchanalian ballet. All such substitutions may for a brief moment fill the emptiness of people's existence, but they cannot fill the void and vacuum of the heart which pants after God, the living God, the heart which is athirst after the Fountain of Living Water; nor will they placate the conscience smarting under the curse of guilt and sin and the insecurity of life.

The Gifts of the Spirit

"They were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Would to God that were a description of our own lives! If it is, and may we pray God that it may be, then, wherever we may be, whether we may be serving God in the Church or in some secular pursuit, we shall live the life of the Spirit. We shall abound in such gifts of the Spirit as "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" (Gal. 5:22). We shall live a life of discipline of body and mind, a life of prayer and of the fear of God, a life of joyful witness to Him who sent the Spirit of God into our hearts. We shall be torchbearers of the Gospel and through that Gospel bring light and salvation into the lives of others. We shall, in brief, be 20th-century examples of the Pentecost miracle. All this is ours for the asking, and so we pray in the words of Philip Melancthon:

"Almighty and Holy Spirit, the Comforter, pure, living, true — illuminate, govern, sanctify me, and confirm my heart and mind in the faith and in all genuine consolation; preserve and rule over me that, dwelling in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, I may be and remain forever in the temple of the Lord and praise Him with a joyful spirit and in union with all the heavenly Church. Amen." (Portals of Prayer, No. 108, 1951.)

Sons of Thunder or Doves of Peace?

By MARTIN J. NAUMANN

Professor of Old Testament, Concordia Seminary, Springfield, Ill.

Overhastiness

There is a scene in Bishop Bo Giertz' book And Some Fell Upon a Rock in which the old pastor gently but firmly shows his young enthusiastic assistant Fridfeldt what it means to be justified by God. Fridfeldt had just told the old gentleman: "I have given my heart to Jesus." The old pastor knows that his young helper is just a little proud of his faith and a little secure in his own merit. So he tells him: "One does not choose a Redeemer, and one does not give Him one's heart. The heart—that's like a rusty tin can on a heap of garbage. What a wonderful birthday gift! But along comes a peculiar gentleman and has mercy on this tin can, pokes his walking stick through it, picks it out of the dirt, and takes it home. That's the way of it." That was not the last of the conversation. It continues and has its fruit. What fascinates us is not so much the down-to-earth illustration, but the tact in approaching the discussion of a serious difference of opinion.

A Difficult Art

If I put myself into the position of one Christian correcting another, I find myself failing in one or the other aspect of what one might call Christian polemics. Either I am overzealous to prove the other man wrong, or I am overtolerant in a matter too sacred to treat lightly. Either I become legalistic, or I forget there is a Law of God. Luther declared that person a real doctor of divinity who would be able properly to distinguish Law and Gospel. Dr. C. F. W. Walther, in one of his lectures, says that it is easy to understand the doctrine of Law and Gospel, but it is the most difficult and highest art of a Christian to apply the doctrine properly.

"Ay, there's the rub," says the honest voice of our Christian conscience. We know well enough that we must "exhort and convince the gainsayers." The battle for the Lord goes on till the end of days. Can anyone who has traced the "wars of the Lord" through the two Testaments possibly declare polemics, disputes, an evil? When we take the Sword of the Spirit and begin wielding it in earnest because we must, we feel how awkward we are at it and how unfit for the work. Yet it must be done. But let me go into my chamber and honestly examine my weakness. It isn't that I have not the Word of Truth. It must be that I make mistakes in wielding the Truth.

There is, for instance, my wish to see some result or advantage, some external progress. I am eager to help others get rid of their weaknesses and mistakes, so much so that I press for signs of repentance, for immediate reform. The opponent has to show right now that he sees his error; I expect him to recant. How easily I am fooled to think that would be a real success. In congregational matters it is often easy to get some outward results in short order, but do I want that most of all? The evangelical man can wait for the fruits of the Gospel because he knows the Gospel bears fruit.

Again, I have a natural inclination to make myself judge and executioner in God's place. I apply Law and Gospel, but the Holy Spirit makes both effective. So "burned up" am I at times that I would like to call down a special sign of God's wrath, as the Sons of Thunder wished when they asked Christ to give them leave to rain fire on the inhospitable people of the land.

It is so easy for me to join in declaring the "condemnations," as they are called in our Confessions. Certainly, error must be condemned, but not as if that were the main aim of our work.

Example of Christ

I forget so often why I ought to apply the Law of God: to prepare the ground for the Gospel. When our Lord states drastically: "Give not that which is holy to the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine," that sounds harsh and final. But what does this mean to me? Does it mean that where there is that impure and vicious attitude of the heart, I must have no love or patience? If I sit in spirit with my Lord at Jacob's Well and see Him, the Holy One, deal with this woman of Samaria, do I not learn how to deal with sinners? Here is this woman of low morals. And what does the Lord do? The Lover of Souls gives her His cure for souls. He tells her of her sins, even of the doctrinal error held by the Samaritans. Does Christ "pull punches" here? No, we can assume that although many townspeople of the Samaritan woman had thrown accusations and slanders in her face, no one had yet told her so simply and so plainly what her status was. And should I, who am after all in the same boat with any miserable sinner, should I not sit down with one in error and simply and humbly speak with him of his sins and mine?

Humility and Charity

Again I must beat my breast and cry, "My guilt, my guilt!" when I think of the sanctity I ascribe to my own horizon. I am tempted to consider my own special way of life the normal way. But is it? Even highly gifted people are in danger of setting standards. It is said that a man with a very high I. Q. may not be the best kind of teacher, since he may not be able to understand why his pupils cannot follow his instructions. Even though he may practice patience with them, he will not enjoy his work. Do I as a Lutheran realize how often I may be guilty of a similar attitude? Say that I have had a Christian home. I have had God-fearing parents, I have had patient Christian teachers. By God's grace I have learned that wisdom which is more precious than all the knowledge of the world. Now I am to apply my Christianity to a person who in my present opinion is an "heretical man." Do I have humility and charity enough to deal with him polemically and evangelically? Do I understand all the circumstances of the case? Do I know that certain times and conditions ask for special emphases in doctrine or practice? Above all, do I remember that my Old Adam is a strong legalist?

I hear in my own heart frequently the words spoken on a housetop at mealtime in Joppa: "Not so, Lord, I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean" (Acts 11). In dealing with others, am I afraid of losing my own righteousness and holiness? Or am I afraid of displeasing others who are unevangelical and legalistic?

The list of my own weaknesses is a long one. There is especially the fault that I underestimate the power of the Gospel. I act as if I must defend the Gospel with my dialectic, my acuity, my knowledge, my talent, my rhetoric, my geniality. But does God need me for that? Certainly He uses me, and for that I daily ought to thank Him, but the Gospel will be preached by the stones if no one else will preach it. To come back to the beginning, it is God who has picked that rusty tin can of my heart and made it His vessel by His grace and power. It is His honor we defend when we defend His Word, and we are to do that without fear or favor. It is not for me to hide my talent and say: I was afraid I might make a mistake in the application of Law and Gospel. It is my duty to wield the Sword of the Spirit in the name of Christ, our Savior.

THE PRESIDENT

One of the objections voiced by the Hon. Wisconsin Synod against the doctrine of the Church as it is presented in the Common Confession is the use of the term "duty" when it speaks of the commission to preach the Gospel. The use of the term "duty" is called "externalizing the concept of the Church." A further statement reads: "The Church must ever be presented as a creation of the Lord also in the work which it performs on earth."

In A Fraternal Word our brethren replied to this: "The immediately preceding context, which speaks of the overwhelming gifts of Christ to the Church, excludes any possibility of taking the Church's 'duty' in the sense of an external compulsion."

Let us note the "immediately preceding context" to which A Fraternal Word refers. We read, Common Confession, Part I, Art. IX, 1, 2, 3: "All believers in Christ constitute the one, holy, Apostolic (in agreement with the Apostles' doctrine) and catholic (universal) Church. Jesus Christ is its Head. Through the means of grace He calls all its members into fellowship with Himself and also unites the members in fellowship with one another."

"To all members of His Church the Lord has given all the rights and prerogatives set forth in His Word. Every Christian has the right of direct access to God without a human mediator."

"To the Church has been given the commission to preach the Gospel and to administer the Sacraments. It is therefore the duty of Christians to unite in local congregations for this purpose."

But we read in the Wisconsin Synod's "A Fraternal Word" Examined, page 10: "What is said by the FW under point 1-b) on page 8 concerning the nature and work of the Church refers to things of which we were perfectly aware in writing our 'Review' (Wis. Report, 1951, page 132, 1). We still hold to our opinion. For to maintain, as does the FW, that the positive statements concerning the gifts of Christ to the Church exclude 'any possibility of taking the Church's duty in the sense of an external compulsion' is to ignore the fact that our natural mind instinctively leans toward legalism, and that such legalistic ideas have indeed crept into the doctrine of the Church time and again. Our criticism was intended as a warning for which we believe there are very strong reasons."

The reader is asked to read again the quotation from the Common Confession given above and judge for himself whether the term "duty" is used in the sense of an external compulsion. Let us take the word as it reads. Let us also note the context in which it occurs.

Furthermore, Common Confession,

Part II (though it had not yet been prepared by the joint committees of the American Lutheran Church and our Synod when the Wisconsin Synod Report of 1951 was adopted, it was prepared and publicized when "A Fraternal Word" Examined was written), in Art. i (3) states: "The Church, as the beloved of God, reflects its love for God by ministering to all men, especially to those of the household of faith," and in Art. x (3): "This solemnly joyous expectancy [i. e., its Lord's return] frees the Church from a sole and desperate concern with things earthly and temporal; it makes the Church free to act spontaneously according to the promptings of the love that is the pulse beat of its faith."

Surely this does not permit the term "duty" to be taken in the sense of external compulsion.

Another objection voiced in the 1951 Report of the Hon. Wisconsin Synod against the Common Confession's statement concerning the Church reads: "We hold that in this connection (Art. X, 1) a further statement is indispensable, namely, that this use of the Means of Grace constitutes the marks of the Church."

To this the writers of our Synod's A Fraternal Word replied: "Although Article IX of the Common Confession, Part I, does not expressly speak of the use of the means of grace as constituting the marks of the Church, the organic connection between the Church's existence and the use of the means of grace is so strongly stated that the absence of the term 'marks' can hardly be felt as a defect. Cf. Art. IX, 1, 2, 3." (These paragraphs are quoted above.)

However, the writer of "A Fraternal Word" Examined is not ready to accept this statement. He writes: "Concerning point 2, Marks of the Church: In its Declaration of 1938 the ALC held that it is permissible to speak of a visible side of the Church 'when defining its essence' (our emphasis) if by this expression nothing else is meant but the use of the Means of Grace. Against this position our 'Review' of 1951 contended that the term 'Marks of the Church' is indispensable. The FW admits that the CC does not use this desirable term. At the same time, however, it calls this section of the CC a strong statement 'concerning the organic connection between the Church's existence and the use of the Means of Grace.' [In both cases our emphasis.]

"It seems to us that this statement actually favors the ALC claim that it is permissible when defining the essence of the Church (again our emphasis) to say that the use of the means of grace constitutes the visible side of the Church."

With regard to speaking of a "visible side of the Church when defining its essence, if by this expression nothing else is meant but the use of the Means of Grace," we should remember:

1. a) The 1938 convention of our Synod heard and adopted the report of its floor committee, which said, among other things: "While the Declaration of the American Lutheran Church representatives, in accepting our Brief Statement, also accepts the doctrine of the Church as the invisible communion of the saints, it has been felt by some that, if the expression, 'the visible side of the Church,' were permitted to remain unexplained, it might give occasion for the fostering of false doctrine, such as the Romanizing teaching which represents the Church as an external religious or social institution. Your Committee finds that our synodical fathers conceded that the Word and the Sacraments may in a certain sense be considered as belonging to the essence of the Church. Therefore a difference in this point need not be divisive of church-fellowship when this expression, 'the visible side of the Church,' is understood in the light of our Synod's pronouncement by Dr. Walther in Das Buffaloer Kolloquium, 1866, p. 9."

b) Our Synod does not favor the terminology "the visible side of the Church." It may easily be misunderstood. It always requires explanation. Our Lutheran Confessions speak of the means of grace as outward "signs" or outward "marks." Because of this our 1938 convention passed the resolution: "That in regard to the propriety of speaking of the 'visible side of the Church' we ask our Committee on Lutheran Union to work to this end that uniform and Scripturally acceptable terminology and teaching be attained."

2. Though Synod acted in good faith in adopting the 1938 Union Resolutions, it realized at the 1947 convention that not all conditions laid down in these resolutions had been fulfilled and that in our own Synod there existed a wide divergence of opinion concerning the 1938 resolutions and consequently their usefulness as a basis for future church fellowship became doubtful. Hence the convention passed the following resolution:

"That Synod declare that the 1938 resolution shall no longer be considered as a basis for the purpose of establishing fellowship with the American Lutheran Church."

3. Our Committee on Doctrinal Unity discussed the Common Confession, Part I, very thoroughly with representatives of the constituent bodies of the Synodical Conference (four days of sessions) and noted all objections which were voiced. Also this objection, that the statement the "use of the Means of Grace consti-

The Psalter

True Promotion and Advancement

Psalm 75:6, 7. "For promotion cometh neither from the east nor from the west nor from the south. But God is the Judge: He putteth down one and setteth up another."

It is natural to be ambitious, to want to "get ahead."

At this time of year our thoughts are especially focused on the matter of advancement, of human progress. School children are getting ready to be "promoted." High school graduates are coming to a fork in the road and are faced with the alternative of going to college or else getting a job or entering military service. College graduates are on the threshold of their life's career. If they are normal, they feel the inner drive to climb higher.

Men and women in business and in the professions, too, desire advancement if they are worth their salt. Such advancement may appear in various forms: new opportunities for service, greater responsibility, a better job. It is natural to want to "be promoted."

It is natural, to be sure, but is it Christian? The answer depends on the motivation that gives rise to the desire. Ambition is a noble thing when it is properly motivated and rightly directed. Christian ambition means to exercise good stewardship.

But ambition, wrongly motivated and misdirected, is a frightening, tragic thing. The path of history is littered with the bones of tyrants whose ambition has proved their undoing. The daily paper tells many a pathetic tale of people overambitious for the wrong things, in the wrong way. They have sought "promotion," as the Psalmist says, from the west, or east, or south. That is, they have fixed their attention on things below.

Ambition, however, is good only if it "goes to our heart." True promotion comes not from below, but from above. "God is the Judge," says the Psalmist. He knows why we want to "get ahead." If our motives are right, He will enable us to "get ahead."

"He putteth down one and setteth up another," our text declares. This is a rule of life. Man cannot disregard God with impunity. False ambition carries within it the seeds of its own destruction. But true ambition is blessed by God. It finds its source and its object in the Cross.

THOMAS COATES

And Jesus Said

The kingdom of God cometh not with observation; neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you.

Luke 17:20, 21.

The importance of this statement of Jesus for the understanding of His message can hardly be exaggerated. Having been asked a question about the time when the kingdom of God would come, He gives vital instruction on this matter. All Bible students are agreed that in Palestine the era of Jesus' earthly life was one of strong religious excitement and keen expectation. People thought the prophecies concerning God's rule were now to be fulfilled, and eyes were strained to detect on the horizon the dawn of a new day—the beginning of the Lord's reign here upon earth, with the exaltation of Israel as a nation and the suppression of unrighteousness everywhere.

The coming of such a grand figure as John the Baptist made people hope that the golden era of the earth's existence was about to be inaugurated. When Jesus Himself stepped before the public, preached His sweet message, and performed miracles of healing, the expectations in many quarters were raised to the highest pitch. "Is the reign of God now to commence?" was the question on many lips. So the Pharisees asked Jesus on the occasion when the words in the caption were spoken as to the time when the reign of God would start.

Note what Jesus says. It is not a visible thing, this reign, or kingdom, of God, heralded by the beating of drums and the formidable tread of legions. It comes as noiselessly as the leaves and flowers of spring. In the next place, it is not merely a future thing; it is already here, says the Savior, the reign of God is in progress right now. The trouble was that the Pharisees did not notice it. This reign of God comes about when His Spirit enters human hearts and makes them believing and trusting and fills them with love toward the Savior and and one's fellow men. The kingdom of God can be spoken of as future if one understands the term to mean the majestic manifestation of Christ's rule which will come with Judgment Day. But in our passage Christ speaks of it as something present, which was in existence at the very time He was speaking.

WILLIAM F. ARNDT

The Creed

"Sitteth on the Right Hand of God the Father Almighty"

"Sitteth" is an indication of dignity, honor due, undisputed authority, regnancy. The king sits on his throne; all others stand.

Jesus is Mediator, Head, King, and High Priest of the Church. The fortunes of His Gospel are in His hands. When we witness the attacks made upon the Church from within by Modernists and false friends, or from without by Communists and devotees of a gadget civilization, our spirits would fain droop in fear that the Church will not endure. But He that sitteth and reigneth with the Father and the Holy Spirit has promised: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." He has promised that the very pick of hell's forces shall not prevail against the Church. Why not? Because, "O Israel, Thy King reigneth!"

He is Lord of heaven, for the Father of glory has set Jesus Christ at His own right hand in the heavenly places. He sits in equal rank with God, not at His feet nor below Him, but at His right hand, so that heaven is His throne and earth His footstool.

Perchance, what we need today to spare us from either the quiet desperation of life or the fearsomeness of the atomic threat is not another book on neuroticism nor another psychiatric treatment, but a recognition that Christ rules the world and overrules all things for good.

Christ's session at the right hand of God should serve to compose our bootless fears. "But, surely, the world situation is getting out of hand! What are we coming to?" Jesus is not at all disturbed by man's often irrational acts. The reins have not dropped from His hands. All authority in heaven and on earth is vested in Him. He adequately fills His position of honor, power, and sovereignty. He sees the end from the beginning. Men may wax hysterical, but not He. He "sitteth" in the full consciousness that the cosmos, the Church, and the heaven of heavens are in His control.

"But what of this topsy-turvy world? Can anything be done about it?" Jesus did something about it once. That was at the beginning, when He changed chaos into order. He will do so again, at the end, when He comes to judge the world with righteousness and the people with His truth.

Wise Builders

During the coming weeks many young people will complete their formal education and will venture forth on their own. An important work lies before them—building a life. There is more to life than just to live it from birth to death. During this interval everyone builds a structure of some kind or another. Some build in a simple way, others in a more elaborate style; some build slowly, others accomplish their purpose in a short period. All are builders, even though at times they may not be conscious of building.

The Carpenter of Nazareth knew something about building. He knew the effect of heavy rains on a roof; He knew how swelling waters, welling around a foundation, could undermine its footing and wash away the house resting on it, especially when storms were beating against the walls. A structure, Jesus said, that is built on a solid foundation will remain, while one that is built on sand will be washed away when waters roll and winds blow.

Young people should be reminded that it makes a world of difference on what kind of foundation they build their lives. Christ and the truths He taught are the rock foundation of life. He who builds on this foundation can be sure that it will stand, no matter what happens. When a life is built on Christ and His Word, a destiny is determined which the storms of life cannot sweep away. When setbacks, frustrations, and disappointments enter young lives, when fortunes totter and friends desert, those who have built wisely can face the future serenely if their character is firmly grounded in the Scriptures, if their lives are built on the solid rock of Christ. Other foundation can no man lay.

Hydrogen Hysteria

Are you afraid of the Hydrogen Bomb? Almost everyone is. When the United States set off those unprecedented explosives some time ago, it is possible that this action was more than a scientific experiment. If there was an unexpressed hope that, as a secondary purpose, the Kremlin would be trembling, no doubt that was accomplished. But the rest of the world was equally frightened.

History proves that man has always feared the introduction of such new, unusual, untried, and terrifying objects of death. Perhaps an equal percentage of our populace felt the same way when gunpowder and dynamite were discovered. Think of the emotional upheaval when lethal gas, "The Big Bertha," and the Atom Bomb were first used!

It is true, the Hydrogen Bomb is a terrible weapon; it is frightening. It is more dangerous and destructive than anything else man has ever invented. But while a Christian may fear its power, he need not become hysterical, hopeless, and fatalistic in his attitude toward this menacing monster. In some parts of the world, tensions have led to hysteria, as though God no longer existed.

But God is still ruling the world. "Be still and know that I am God!" He holds everything in the palm of His hand. He who gave man the ability to invent this deadly instrument, also made him able to control it and to use it for constructive purposes. There is no good reason to suppose that God will let man use this powerful weapon to wipe himself off the earth. That prerogative God has reserved for Himself. He still has "all power in heaven and on earth!" Christian people have the assurance: "there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." He has promised: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Children of God, look to Christ, the Savior, and hear Him speak with comfort: "Be not afraid!"

"The Pity of It"

More than 500 Hindus were killed recently in a stampede when with millions of others they attempted to bathe in the waters of the "holy" Ganges River to free their souls from having to live through many reincarnations, reappearances in other bodily forms. What a pity that superstition takes such a toll! Not only lower-class Hindus but intellectuals and so-called "holy men" are enslaved by this soul-destroying belief. "See their pitiful condition. Lo, gross darkness covers all!"

Do they need the Gospel ray to free them from their blindness? We know they do. Do they want it? It seems not. Only a short time ago Rajendra Prasad, President of India, declared that Christian missionaries will have full freedom to preach and do social work, but he urged that they should not be motivated by a desire for conversions. In other words, India is ready to accept economic and medical aid, but she does not want her people to become converts to "Western religion," to the Gospel of Christ. Such an attitude is "normal" for the natural man, to whom the Cross of Christ is foolishness. Christians, however, will not be deterred from their primary mission to make converts of the heathen. Christians will continue to give material aid to hungry and backward people, but the main purpose of Christian mission work always must and will be the rescue of the souls of dying men.

Have You Security?

Security is the watchword of the hour. Everyone wants security—the laborer, the white-collar worker, the government employee, the 65-year-old, the aged. All want security—security of possessions, of job, of health, of relationships.

What is secure? House and home are not always secure. Stocks and bonds are not always secure. Family relationships are not always secure. Good health is not always secure. The governments of this world are not finally secure. Even temples made with hands are not finally secure. "No man is sure of life" (Job 24:22).

Only God and His kingdom and His Word are finally secure. God is our Refuge and Strength. The gates of hell shall not prevail against His kingdom. The Word of the Lord endureth forever.

Is God your God? Are you a member of Christ's kingdom? Do you believe His Word? Of course. Then you have final security.

When to Stop Giving

"This everlasting giving for the church! When will it stop?" Here is the answer: It will stop when the Gospel has been preached in all the world; when all the unchurched have been approached; when pastors, teachers, and missionaries no longer need money to live on; when church buildings and schools require no upkeep; when the aged, the sick, the distressed no longer need care; when no one in the world suffers hunger; when all the elect are gathered in; when God Himself calls a halt.

How Others Do It

FROM A PARISH BULLETIN

A progressive businessman, a banker, a craftsman, a teacher, a lawyer, doctor — all subscribe to read trade magazines in order to be able to keep up with the times. An intelligent Lutheran wants to know what is happening in Lutheran church circles and therefore reads the LUTHERAN WITNESS, which is the trade magazine of The Lutheran Church — Missouri Synod.

In a Christian's life there can be no standstill. We advance or retreat, we gain Christian knowledge or lose it again, we keep abreast of the times or we fall behind and get into a rut. If you hope to be a well-informed member of the Church, it is necessary that you read your church paper in order also to be able to "give answer to those who inquire about the faith which is in you."

The LUTHERAN WITNESS gives information on matters of doctrine and practice of faith, it interprets events of the day in the light of the Word of God, it warns against false teachings, it reports on growth and progress of the kingdom of God.

We have 880 separate family heads, or units, in —. Of these only 80 subscribed to the LUTHERAN WITNESS in 1953, while 800 of our families, or units, had no way of knowing what was going on in the Church nor of growing in church knowledge.

We would like to encourage every family or head of a separate unit of — to subscribe to your church paper. It belongs in a Christian Lutheran home.

To order the WITNESS is very simple. The last envelope in your pack for January reads "For My Subscription to the LUTHERAN WITNESS." Enclose $1.50, write your name and address on the envelope and place in the collection basket. — "Knowledge begets interest, interest begets action."

FROM DISTRICT SUPPLEMENTS

Several years back we had a congregation-wide subscription for the WITNESS, but it was voted out. Last year only 11 families responded to my urging (in the bulletin, in sermons, in talks to groups) and subscribed. This year I decided on a different plan. In addition to the above-mentioned methods of getting subscriptions (with which I waited until several other "drives," etc., were out of my way), I also approached each family personally if they had not handed in a subscription. The 11 subscriptions have increased to 32. And I'm going to approach 19 more families before I call it done. I still think there is no substitute for the man-to-man approach. And I want the LUTHERAN WITNESS in the homes of my congregation, and read, too. I won't let them forget they have the magazine in their homes.

"Our bill for the LUTHERAN WITNESS ($284.00) will be paid in full from the General Fund." — This important sentence is lifted from the October bulletin of —. We hope that it will not be long before all congregations handle this item in the businesslike manner adopted by this church. We are glad that a growing number is doing it now, including our own congregation.

What's the Answer?

Question: Doesn't your recent editorial on sponsors give the impression that our whole Christian life depends on this one formality?

Answer: The use of sponsors is not an ordinance of God, but of the Church. Assuredly, sponsors add nothing to the cleansing and sanctifying power of Holy Baptism; hence our Christian life does not depend upon them. But whenever sponsors take this obligation seriously, and not merely as a formality, they perform valuable Christian service. In the words of our Catechism they "testify that the children have properly been baptized; assist in caring for the Christian education and training of their godchildren, especially if these should lose their parents; and pray for them." All this is in harmony with the Scriptures, a comfort to parents, and a blessing to the children.

Question: Is it proper to say, as a writer of your paper recently stated, that "we came to realize that through our sins we have brought pain and misery upon ourselves?"

Answer: That statement must be understood in the light of its context. In the previous sentence the writer asserted that "our thoughts go to Eden, where we find that the transgression of God's Law caused the gloom of sickness and death to enter the body of man." The pain and misery suffered by mankind is the consequence of the Fall.

You are correct in holding that a man's personal sin is certainly not always the direct cause of his illness. That may be true in certain cases (1 Cor. 11:30), especially with regard to social diseases, and we always do well to search our hearts when sickness befalls us, but it would be unjustified and loveless to accuse every bed patient of special wrongdoing (John 9:1-3).

Question: Is it proper for a Christian to operate a saloon?

Answer: A sincere Christian will find it very difficult to operate a saloon which would remain above reproach. On the one hand, it is true that Holy Scripture does not forbid every use of strong drink (John 2:7-9; 1 Tim. 5:23). On the other hand, it frequently warns against the dangers inherent in it (Prov. 23:29-33; Eph. 5:18), and it emphatically condemns drunkenness as a sin which excludes its victim from the kingdom of God (1 Cor. 6:10; Gal. 5:21). While we must therefore conclude that the operation of a respectable drinking parlor is not in itself sinful, yet experience shows that such an undertaking is fraught with constant and great difficulties. For not all patrons are willing to be restrained, and if the operator permits them to drink to excess, or to be reckless spenders, or to use unbecoming language, or to gamble on his premises, he becomes a partaker of their sins and a contributor to their delinquency. Of that no Christian man will want to become guilty. Furthermore, the matter of giving offense to weak Christians and to the world must be considered (1 Cor. 10:32). At best, therefore, the operation of an unobjectionable drinking establishment would appear to be a most difficult and conscience-troubling venture.

CAMP ARCADIA

If you have ever been at Camp Arcadia on the northeastern shore of Lake Michigan, your pleasant memories will excel anything anyone else can tell you about it. Enjoying Camp Arcadia is better than reading about it. The next best thing to being there is to view the 16mm colored movies which are available to any church group. Camp Arcadia, owned by the young people of our Church, is a most delightful summer resort, where for more than 30 years thousands of Lutheran youths and families have enjoyed rest, recreation, and fellowship, and have found opportunities for spiritual growth.

The 1954 season opens June 19 and closes on Labor Day, September 6.

Ancient Arcadia was a picturesque district of the Peloponnesus in Greece, praised for the simplicity and contentment of its people, and represented by the poets as the home of pastoral poetry. Camp Arcadia lends itself to other equally delightful idyls. There is scenic beauty, and the praise of simplicity and contentment is deserved as truly as it was in ancient Arcadia. That is, if simplicity means to be one's self, and contentment, to have exactly what one desires at a summer resort. If it is swimming, boating, or fishing, you will find it there. If it is hiking, playing games, or just looking on, Camp Arcadia has it. For good meals and rest there is no better place. But all these things are surpassed by the pleasure of Christian fellowship and the opportunities for spiritual growth.

For inspiration and edification the following program has been scheduled for the present season:

June 21-25. Mr. W. F. Weiherman, Which Way Ahead?

June 28-July 2. Rev. Adolph R. Meyer, Oriental Religions.

July 5-9. Rev. Kenneth Ahl, Church and Public Relations.

July 12-16. Rev. E. P. Weber, Studies in Christian Living.

July 19-23. Dr. Clarence Peters, Forward with Youth.

July 26-30. Rev. Samuel J. Roth, Alone with God.

Aug. 2-6. Rev. Wm. H. Hillmer, The Christian Mission to America.

Aug. 9-13. Rev. Paul G. Hansen, Courtship and Marriage.

Aug. 16-20. Rev. H. H. Koppelman, Asia and the South Pacific.

Aug. 23-27. Mr. John Strietelmeier, The Christian Layman.

Aug. 30-Sept. 3. Mr. Gerhard Schroth, Enjoying Music.

There will be open forums, movies, and other presentations by Church and League leaders on some weekday evenings.

tutes the marks of the Church" was missing, was carefully noted. This was taken into consideration and discussed very frankly with the Commissioners of the American Lutheran Church when the Common Confession, Part II, was prepared. As a result, Article viii (3) reads: "The means of grace (the Gospel in the Word and the Sacraments) are the only genuine marks of the Church, and by them Christ through the Holy Spirit creates and preserves faith in the hearts of men. Through them the Church manifests itself on earth."

Our Synod entertains no thought of introducing some new doctrine concerning the Church. We shall continue to teach that all believers in Christ, and only believers in Christ, are members of the one, holy, Christian Church. We cannot look into other people's hearts to see whether they are believers. Only God can do this. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." To us the Church is invisible. We reject as false doctrine any teaching which represents the Church as an external religious institution. We do not favor nor do we use the term "visible side" of the Church. We rather use the terminology of the Lutheran Confessions and speak of the use of the means of grace as the "marks" of the Church.

In conclusion let me direct attention to the fact that the Common Confession does not use the terminology "visible side" of the Church, but in Part II it speaks very clearly of the means of grace as the "marks" of the Church.

A seven-man Commission on Mass Communication, appointed by the Board of Directors of Synod, will coordinate radio, television, and audiovisual activities of Synod. The commission will serve in an advisory and operative capacity. Milton Carpenter, controller of the City of St. Louis, is chairman of the commission, which includes Ralph Petering, controller of Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co.; O. Charles Klingsick, Jr., vice-president in charge of operations, Day-Brite Lighting, Inc.; Herbert W. Waltke, vice-president of Waltke Investment Co.; William J. Kirchhoff, teacher of music, Lutheran High School; the Rev. Paul G. Stephan, pastor of Mount Calvary Church; and the Rev. E. C. Kieninger, copastor of Pilgrim Church. All are St. Louisans.

The Lutheran Laymen's League sponsors the radio program, the Lutheran Hour, and Synod produces the TV series "This Is the Life." Synod is an acknowledged leader among U. S. churches in the production of motion pictures.

Registrars of 14 synodical colleges and seminaries met in connection with the annual convention of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers in St. Louis, April 23. This first meeting of the registrars in the synodical institutions provided an opportunity for them to standardize policies and procedures as to student admissions, interschool transfers, and student classifications. Such standardization is increasingly important as the number of students for the ministry and for teaching in Lutheran schools grows and as governmental and other regulations become more complex.

2112 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 23, N. Y., is the new location of Synod's Department of Public Relations, the American Lutheran Publicity Bureau, and the Atlantic District headquarters. For 22 years the latter two organizations had their offices at 1819 Broadway, and the Public Relations office since 1948. The new location in the Central Savings Bank Building provides increased space for each of the organizations.

Howard A. Beisner, 27, the Southern Illinois District's new circulation manager for the LUTHERAN WITNESS, is a member of St. John's Church, Chester, Ill., where the Rev. Otto B. Hussmann is pastor. The Rev. Henry F. Gerecke, institutional chaplain at Chester, writes in the Southern Illinois Supplement: "Howard Beisner's smile is infectious, and his laughing eyes sparkle. Although severely handicapped, he loves to attend his church, serve his fellow Walther Leaguers as secretary, do crocheting and repair clocks as his hobby. He is a baseball fan, and his favorite radio station is our own KFUD. Typing affords him pleasure and worthwhile pastime.

"Every Sunday morning his father carries him into church. Howard sits in the front pew with his parents. At home his wheel chair is his means of getting about. You see, Howard has never walked. He lost his best pal when his brother died in service on Guam. 'I'm walking behind you' has a special meaning for Howard.

"While trusting his Savior, he never hesitates to testify for Him, especially in the barbershop. Delightful, inspiring, and straightforward personality traits have won him a big place in our hearts.

"We often call him 'Mr. Lutheran Witness.' He loves every minute of his new position and hopes to serve the District to the best of his ability with fullness and gladness of his overflowing heart. His parents believe they are closer to God because of him."

If a Greek Orthodox girl participates in a beauty contest, not only she but also her parents will be excommunicated, the Holy Synod of the Greek Orthodox Church in Athens warned in an encyclical letter addressed to priests. Such contests, the synod said, are injurious to "the dignity and chastity of womanhood and disturb the peace and harmony of the family."

Presidents and business managers of Synod's 14 colleges and seminaries joined in a workshop on budget procedures, April 28 and 29, in St. Louis. The Board for Higher Education and Synod's Fiscal Office sponsored the workshop to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of synodical financial procedure and to develop economical operation in Synod-owned schools.

More than half of all philanthropic giving in America goes to churches, the Rev. Thomas K. Thompson, executive director of the National Council of Churches' Department of Stewardship and Benevolence, told a conference of 75 professional fund-raisers meeting in Buck Hill Falls, Pa.

Approximately $1,600,000,000 goes to Protestant churches annually. Assuming that Roman Catholics and Jews give at about the same rate as Protestants, total church giving, Mr. Thompson estimated, is more than $2,500,000,000, or more than half of the $4,500,000,000 which Americans give each year to philanthropies.

Dr. Benson Y. Landis, associate director of the Research and Survey Department, said that the U. S. is in "an era of church building" but that the churches are not paying enough attention to "the purchasing power of ministers' salaries."

Chaplain (Colonel) Luther W. Evans (United Lutheran) was appointed new commandant of the Armed Forces Chaplain School, Fort Slocum, N. Y., to succeed Chaplain (Colonel) Joseph R. Koch (Roman Catholic), who is retiring. Chaplain Evans is a graduate of Gettysburg College and Seminary.

Two Danish missionaries have been denied visas for entrance into India, a report from Copenhagen stated. Doctor Kirstine Carlsen, medical missionary in India since 1926, and now in Denmark on furlough, was refused permission to return by Indian authorities. No reason had been given for the refusal. Since 1928 Dr. Carlsen was head of the Trikukoilur Mission Hospital.

Erik Stidsen, scheduled to go to East Jaypore as an evangelist, twice was refused a visa. The Danish State Lutheran Church, which he serves, assigned him to another mission field.

The High School Department of St. Paul's College, Concordia, Mo., was accepted into membership with the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools at its meeting in Chicago, March 26.

Dr. Marion S. Schott of Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg, was chairman of an examining committee of three principals of high schools now members of the association. The examining committee commended the school particularly for its instruction, guidance program, varied offerings for students not taking courses leading to professional work in the Church, extracurricular program, and adequacy of plant and equipment. The committee also commended the staff for its careful evaluation and for moving rapidly to remove any deficiency.

Although St. Paul's High School has been fully accredited with the State of Missouri for more than 20 years, the school applied for regional accreditation only this spring.

CONFERENCE ON NURSERY MATERIALS, SPONSORED BY BOARD FOR PARISH EDUCATION AND CONCORDIA PUBLISHING HOUSE, ST. LOUIS, APRIL 20—21: Probably the first synodically called educational-problem meeting in which all the invited participants were women dealt exclusively with the spiritual needs of the prekindergarten child. The purpose of the conference was to aid Synod's Sunday School Department in planning the most desirable kinds of material for the growing nursery classes in the Sunday schools of the Church. The conference recommended that a new nursery course be prepared and scheduled to appear in the fall of 1955 and that the course furnish a weekly four-page leaflet for the child, a small general handbook on nursery work, a 40-page quarterly for teachers, a quarterly packet of activity material, and a set of 52 large pictures for instruction.

The picture presents the women, qualified by experience and special interest, who met with the Sunday school editors and Arthur W. Gross, editor of vacation Bible school materials. Seated (l. to r.): Mrs. G. L. Wind, Miss Emma Linhorst, Mrs. O. E. Feucht, Mrs. Rose Roloff, Mrs. Elmer A. Kettner, Mrs. John Goodbrake, Mrs. Frank Kothe, Mrs. Allene Albrecht; standing: Miss Elaine Arkebauer, Mrs. A. C. Mueller, Mrs. Jacob Amant, Rev. Allan H. Jahsmann, Dr. A. C. Mueller, Mr. O. E. Seibel, office manager, C. P. H.; Mr. Gross, Miss Edith Booster; Miss Helen Weber. Missing from picture: Mrs. Mildred Hermann.

PROF. WALTER F. WOLBRECHT INSTALLED AS EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT OF THE BOARD FOR HIGHER EDUCATION: In a service at Concordia Seminary, Springfield, Ill., for the faculty and students as well as the presidents of synodical colleges and seminaries, who attended a plenary meeting of the Board for Higher Education at Springfield, April 30, the Rev. W. C. Birkner of Fort Wayne, chairman of the board, performed the rite of induction; the Rev. L. W. Heidemann of Hinton, Iowa, preached on Phil. 4:13; and Dr. James Manz of First St. Paul's, Chicago, officiated.

"As never before, the force and spread of human sinfulness makes clear to every Christian how utterly dependent we as individuals and as a church body are upon the sustaining grace of God in Christ Jesus our Lord," Pastor Heidemann said. "In directing the work of training an adequate number of qualified pastors and teachers for the incoming generation of our Church, under God, we are affecting every possible phase of stewardship, missionary enterprise, and internal and external growth for the next period of years."

Closed-circuit television equipment at St. Paul's Lutheran Church (American Lutheran Church), Toledo, Ohio, enables overflow groups to see and hear services. The 27-inch TV screen enables an overflow audience of 300 persons sitting in the social room to view the chancel, pulpit, and lectern and at the same time to hear the service on the public-address system. The church seats about 1,000 persons. Officials of the congregation readily authorized the investment of $2,500 for the installation. St. Paul's is believed to be one of five churches using closed-circuit TV. Others are in Chicago, New York, Atlanta, and Dallas.

An automatic record player with a high-fidelity record selector, placed in the chapel, plays familiar hymns by noted choral groups and soloists, organ music, and Scripture readings.

Dr. Howard W. Ferrin, president of Providence-Barrington Bible College, Providence, R. I., warned delegates to the National Association of Evangelicals at their annual session in Cleveland that "20th-century man, plagued by the fear that he is going to blow himself to bits, no longer believes it unthinkable that total collapse will overtake our generation."

Dr. Harold J. Ockenga of Park Street Church, Boston, another speaker, said the hydrogen bomb, "the fiery cross over Bikini," was "the world's greatest contemporary challenge to the Christian Church." Communist propaganda must be counteracted by aggressive proclamation of truth concerning God, moral law, the value of man, the privilege of freedom, and humanitarian considerations. "Only the Christian revelation and Gospel is sufficient to establish these truths. Not political liberalism, not theological modernism, not left-wing Socialism is able to do this," he said.

The total world Jewish population is 11,627,000. More than five million of this number reside in the U. S., the American Jewish Year Book for 1954 reports. Soviet Russia has the next largest Jewish population, with two million; and Israel, 1,463,000, which is 38,000 more than last year. Germany, which once had a Jewish population of 600,000, has only 25,500 today.

Dean James A. Pike of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, told the 35th annual meeting of the Associated Church Press: "Neither the pulpit nor the church press should endorse particular candidates nor specific legislation, but it must call 'evil' if we are to be of 'the goodly fellowship of the prophets' which the Te Deum invites to praise God. God hates evil in all forms."

Six Yugoslav Lutherans are studying theology in Germany during the 1953-1954 school year, marking the first time that students have been permitted to leave their country under the government of Marshal Tito. Five members of the Slovenian Lutheran Church and one from the Croatian Lutheran Church are studying at the Universities of Erlangen and Goettingen, supported by the Gustavus Adolphus Society of Sweden and the Lutheran World Federation.

The four national groups of Lutherans in Yugoslavia in order of their strength are Slovak, Slovenian, Magyar, and Croatian.

A new law which went into effect in August, 1953, guarantees religious freedom and places all religious groups on an equal basis, including the minority Lutheran Church of about 125,000 members.

First Immanuel Church of Chicago is celebrating its centennial this month. On the third Sunday of festival services, May 16, the Rev. A. H. Werfelmann, President of the Northern Illinois District, was the preacher in the morning; Dr. A. O. Fuerbringer, President of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, in the afternoon; and in the evening Valparaiso Choir presented a sacred concert.

Earlier this month the Rev. Hermann Bauer, who served the congregation from 1933 to 1941, spoke at one of the centennial services, and Missionary Luther Meinzen of India, the son of a former pastor, at another service.

Organized as a daughter congregation of First St. Paul's on March 19, 1854, First Immanuel erected a frame building, school, and living quarters for the pastor at a cost of $1,030. In 1888 the present structure, which seats 1,400, was built for $58,000.

The first minister whom the congregation called was the Rev. George Schick, who later became professor of ancient languages and "Rektor" of Concordia College, Fort Wayne. One former pastor, the Rev. Rudolph Lange, was called to be professor at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis. The longest pastorate was held by Dr. Louis Hoelter, 1878 until his death in 1922. During these eventful 44 years the congregation expanded and flourished. Children in the confirmation classes were numbered in the hundreds, and services were crowded beyond capacity. All together, more than 20,000 baptisms are recorded in the church's records. The Rev. Edward Hoelter was assistant to his father from 1896 to 1922, and pastor of the congregation from 1922 until his death in 1933.

After World War I the changing neighborhood and the transfer of members markedly affected the congregation. First Immanuel is now experiencing a revival of church life in a new interest in mission work among the many races and nationalities on Chicago's Near West Side. Because of the church's proximity to the rapidly expanding Chicago Medical Center, a chapter of Gamma Delta was established this year for the professional students at the U. of Illinois and the nurses at the hospitals in the center.

Since May of 1953 the Rev. Ralph L. Moellering has been First Immanuel's pastor as well as student pastor in the Chicago Medical Center.

Dr. Arthur Larson, 44, a Lutheran layman, has been named Under-Secretary of Labor. President Eisenhower nominated Dr. Larson, dean of the U. of Pittsburgh Law School, to the post which has been vacant since James P. Mitchell, Secretary of Labor, took office last October.

In 1931 Mr. Larson was graduated from Augustana College, Sioux Falls, S. Dak. After studying in the Law School of the U. of South Dakota, he became a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, England, where he received his B. A. and M. A. degrees in law. From 1935 to 1939 he practiced law in Milwaukee, and from 1939 to 1941 was associate professor of law at the U. of Tennessee. During the war he served in the Office of Price Administration and the Foreign Economic Administration, then returned to teaching as professor of law at Cornell U., 1945 to 1953, when he became dean of the Pittsburgh Law School. Last year Augustana awarded him an LL. D. degree.

Dr. Larson's two-volume treatise, The Law of Workmen's Compensation, is regarded as the standard in a field of the Labor Department's operations.

The barring of a distinguished Negro from membership in the Church Club of New York, an organization of Protestant Episcopal laymen, drew a rebuke from Bishop Horace W. B. Donegan of New York and led Clifford P. Morehouse, president, to withdraw his candidacy for re-election to that post. Membership in the group, which Bishop Donegan described as a "social club" and "not an official diocesan organization," was denied by its committee on admissions to Justice Hubert T. Delany of the New York Domestic Relations Court. Considerations of color or race did not govern the adverse vote on Justice Delany, the chairman of the committee said. Bishop Donegan urged club members to "reflect on the Church's teaching that all men are equal before God." There are more Negro Episcopalians — 15,000 communicants — in the diocese of New York than in any other diocese in the U. S., the bishop stated.

The first U. S. postage stamp bearing the motto "In God We Trust" was introduced in a ceremony in Washington, D. C., in April. The new red, white, and blue eight-cent stamp depicts the Statue of Liberty. In accepting the first sheet of the stamps, President Eisenhower said that U. S. letter writers in using the new stamp for overseas mail are putting on envelopes this message: "Here is the land of liberty and the land that lives in respect for the Almighty's mercy to us. . . . The flame of liberty symbolizes our determination always to remain free, a haven for the oppressed. It is an acknowledgment that all men are dependent on the Almighty."

At Bloomfield, N. J., trustees of the Community Chest denied the request of the town's Ministers' Association to exclude religious charities from chest agencies. The ministers' group, a Protestant organization, has tried three times to have religious agencies banned from the chest since the Associated Catholic Charities was included several years ago. The Catholic Charities budget in the chest this year was $15,000. Two Protestant-sponsored agencies in the chest were the Bloomfield Home for Aged People, whose budget was $1,700, and the Job Haines Home for the Aged, $1,500. The chest, which serves 11 agencies, raised $79,486 of its $91,000 goal for this year and made allotments on the basis of 90 per cent of budgets.

"Until the Community Chest is constituted on the basis of the exclusion of all religious charities we shall be obliged to recommend to our congregations that they discontinue their support," the Ministers' Association wrote to the officials of the chest. "Inasmuch as the principle of freedom of choice of religion is guaranteed by the Constitution of the U. S., the responsibility rests solely with those who choose this freedom to support and sustain their institutions with their own resources."

The main result of the amendment to the Refugee Relief Act which recently passed the House of Representatives on voice vote and which the Senate also is expected to pass, would make more flexible the use of Italian, Greek, and Dutch quotas as they are divided between those who have relatives in the U. S. and those who are refugees. The present quotas are: Italian refugees — 45,000; Italian relatives — 15,000. Greek refugees — 15,000; Greek relatives — 2,000. Dutch refugees — 15,000; Dutch relatives — 2,000. While the amendment proposes to open a door between the relative and refugee categories in each of the three countries, permitting visas in an undersubscribed category to be transferred to an oversubscribed category in the same country, the amendment does not propose a similar flexibility between the 5,000 "expellee" visas and the 35,000 "escape" visas in Germany and Austria.

The new amendment also provides "(1) that the requirement for a certificate of readmission by the country of emigration shall be waived in the case of orphans under 10 years old; (2) that aliens already in the U. S. who cannot return to their homeland for fear of persecution may apply for adjustment of status without having to prove that the events preventing their return occurred since their entry into the U. S., and (3) that a small group of Japanese brought to the U. S. for internment in 1952 now may apply for adjustment of status and permanent residence."

ENTIRE FAMILY OF HARRISON JACQUET (great-grandson of Jules Jacquet, a French trader who, with Roman Catholic missionaries, colonized the Peninsula area) was baptized by the Rev. Ervin R. Lemke at Faith Church in Allouez (Green Bay), Wis., in December. Until house-to-house canvassers from Faith Church invited the Jacquets to attend services, they had not been members of a church. Soon the children came to Sunday school, and the parents to church-membership class. Eleven months later the Jacquets made their public confession of faith in Jesus Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacquet stand to the reader's left of Pastor Lemke. The children are (l. to r.): Mildred, Russell, Stanley, Elaine, holding Sandra, Jeanne, and Harrison, Jr.

"Members of Faith are becoming increasingly aware that when they obey God's command to 'go and tell,' the Lord will grant a bountiful harvest," the North Wisconsin Supplement says. The members' most recent canvass resulted in seven new children for the Sunday school, two baptisms of children, and three adults for a new membership class — all from families with no church affiliation.

Walter A. Hansen's 25th anniversary as music critic for the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel was commemorated with a full page of pictures and story in the "Roto" magazine section of the newspaper on April 17.

"The by-line 'By Walter A. Hansen' has been familiar to News-Sentinel readers for the past 25 years. The Concordia College professor reviewed not only classical music but dramatic presentations as well for many years and was a regular contributor of articles on piano technique to Etude magazine," the article stated. "A native of Little Rock, Ark., where he began his musical studies, Professor Hansen was graduated from Concordia College here and Concordia Theological Seminary in St. Louis."

To readers of the Cresset, Professor Hansen's reviews of recordings and his feature articles are well known.

The Welsh Presbytery, which includes 13 congregations of Welsh background, voted at Racine, Wis., to dissolve the organization. Its petition for dissolution will be presented to the Wisconsin synod at its annual meeting in June. If the synod concurs, the petition will go to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. for final action.

In the early 1840's the Welsh came to southeastern Wisconsin, where they kept their own language until the turn of the century, when immigration virtually stopped.

Dr. Frederick E. Mayer, 61, professor of systematic theology at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, since 1937, has completed a 600-page book, The Religious Bodies of America, published in April by Concordia Publishing House. Commenting on the volume, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said on May 1: "It is a learned discussion of the theology of the various American church bodies. The book was more than 11 years in preparation. There were times when Professor Mayer despaired of finishing it; there were also times when his associates despaired of his life."

Dr. F. E. Mayer

In recent years Dr. Mayer has suffered from serious and often painful illness. From a wheel chair he lectures three times a week to students. Also from his wheel chair, twice during Easter week, he conducted moving devotions at chapel exercises for the seminary students and faculty.

The National Council of Churches plans to suggest two amendments to the proposed law in regard to social security coverage for ministers. Dr. Robert E. van Deusen, who observes the Washington scene for the National Lutheran Council, said: "(1) To put coverage of clergy on a self-employment basis or on a status similar to present coverage of lay employees, except that coverage on change of employment should depend on voluntary agreement of both the employing agency and the clergyman, and (2) to define 'employer' and 'employee' in such a way as to recognize the unique relationship of a church or church agency and a pastor who accepts a call."

Distribution of $650,000 to a group of Bible institutes and missionary societies from the estate of Mrs. Leona Brookman, widow of a Denver real estate man, has been ordered by a Denver court. The distribution is the first from a total of $1,233,000 which Mrs. Brookman willed to religious groups. The American Bible Society of New York City and the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago each will receive $200,000; Latin American Mission of Ridgefield Park, N. J., and Central American Mission of Dallas, $60,000 each.

The Churchman, liberal independent Protestant Episcopal journal, published in New York, commemorated its 150th anniversary with a special issue. The paper is said to be the oldest general religious journal in the English-speaking world.

OUR SONGS OF PRAISE

COMPILED AND EDITED BY EDWARD W. KLAMMER

"Good Christian songbooks for children are truly rare. Avoiding the extremes of either the insipid and trite or the heavy and unintelligible, this collection of hymns for children is indeed excellent for use in the home, school, and Sunday School.

"Mr. Klammer has successfully shown that the majority of the tunes in the Lutheran Hymnal are easy enough even for comparatively young children . . . Children using Our Songs of Praise will learn the tunes in the adult hymnal to texts on their level, and when they come to church, they will recognize the melodies as 'old friends!'"

Dr. A. C. Repp in Previews

Our Songs of Praise introduces children between the ages of 5 and 10 to the rich musical heritage of the Church with texts they can understand.
